G.O.P. FIGHT IS OPENED IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, June 6.—The National Committee of the Republican party held its first pre-convention meeting today. With the rap of the gavel one of the bitterest fights the party ever has seen was ushered in. The struggle was recognized by leaders of the three factions.

The first fight will go to Taft. That was conceded on all sides today. There will be no contest over the seat of Victor Rosewater, acting chairman of the National Committee and committeeman from Nebraska.

The Taft program has crystallized today. Roosevelt will be elected chairman. He will be official chauffeur of the steam roller. The committee will seat all the Taft delegates. At least they will seat them until Taft is certain that he has enough to nominate and until the "moral effect" on the supposedly wavering Southern delegations is sufficiently impressed.

It will be made temporary chairman, but will also be advanced for permanent chairman. The Taft program has one object only—defeat Roosevelt.

From Taft headquarters comes the prophecy that Roosevelt will bolt. Ardent Roosevelt supporters assert Taft men are trying to force a bolt. The selection of Root as permanent chairman is the fact pointed to by these men to prove their assertion.

About the time Root receives the second election at the hands of the convention—according to the prophecy of the Taft men—Colonel Roosevelt with his followers will file from the hall and the "rump convention" of the Oyster Bay candidate's followers will begin. Senator Dixon is assiduously putting the soft pedal on this talk. It grieves Senator Dixon deeply. "It is preposterous," as he views the situation, "to conceive that a candidate with enough votes to nominate him on the first ballot should bolt. Both William R.

Bancroft Talks in 5 Tongues Astonishes Foreign Visitors

Port Director's Welcome in:

HUGH BANCROFT

- English
- French
- German
- Italian
- Spanish

General Hugh Bancroft, chairman of the Directors of the Port of Boston, won a new title last night at the banquet tendered by the Boston Chamber of Commerce to eighty of the delegates to the International Congress of Navigation.

It was that of a linguistic Admirable Crichton.

And in winning this honor, General Bancroft not only delighted the representatives of thirteen nations, but astonished the hundred or so native Bostonians present.

MANY TONGUES ARE HEARD.

General Bancroft was the last speaker. Preceding him were those who spoke in English-English, Canadian-English, American-English, Russian-English, German-English, Swedish-English, Spanish-English, French and German.

The names of some of the speakers caused the toastmaster, Joseph B. Russell, much trouble in pronunciation.

When General Bancroft was introduced he delivered a most effective talk about what Boston has been as a seaport, what its natural advantages over other ports still are, and the prestige Boston proposes to regain—in English.

Then without any preface he continued in French:

Address in French.

La presence d'un si grande nombre des plus grandes nations de l'Europe nous cause un vif plaisir. La croissance de vos grands ports de mer est une econ et une inspiration dans notre entreprise.

Nous desirons principalement etablir des relations commerciales plus intimes avec le continent Europeen.

He said more in the same language, but the above remarks translated are.

The presence of so many representatives of the great nations of Europe is very flattering to us. We find in the growth of your great ports both a lesson and an inspiration for us in our undertaking. We are very anxious to establish closer commercial relations with the continent of Europe.

And without turning an orthoepist hair and barely waiting for the applause from the French scholars present to stop, he went on:

Welcome in German.

Mit grossem Vergnugen konstatiere ich das Deutsche Reich, heute abend und bei den Sitzungen, durch eine grosse Anzahl von Abgeordneten vertreten ist, und ich danke ihnen herzlich fur das Interesse das Sie durch Ihr Erscheinen bekunden.

Besonders gerne wurde ich darin eine Vorbedeutung fur noch herzlichere Beziehungen zwischen dem Deutschen Reich und Boston sehen.

Schon haben wir uns an Hamburg gewandt, um uns bei der einen der beide Koeniginnen der Nordsee Rath zu holen, und mit grosser Freude Begrussten wir hier seinerseit den Ihnen allen lu. wohlbekannten Herrn Baurat Wendenuth.

Mr. Wendenuth was devoted to long serenades, each member of the party following his own inclination and visiting what most interested him. Among the points of interest inspected were the Wachusett dam of the Metropolitan Water Works at Clinton, the coal handling plant of the New England Gas & Coke Company at Everett, the plant of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company in South Boston and the Metropolitan Park System.

This evening an informal dinner will be tendered the visitors at the City Club, and at 11 p. m. the party will board special train for Albany.

long ago Baurat Wendenuth, who is well known to you all.

Following which, more applause, and then:

Then Came Italian.

Me rincresce non poter dar in lenguata al Delegati d' Italia nella bro bellissima lingua e questo atto perche Boston, ed il suo porto, sempre e stato il centro di proferenza per gli Italiani che vengono agli Stati Unit. Meaning, in regular Bostonese:

I regret that I am unable to welcome the Italian delegates in their own delightful language. All I can more so because the port of Boston has long been a favorite for Italians coming to the United States.

Then again, turning to the delegate from Argentina, and with still not an unruffled forensic breathe:

Spanish Was Next.

Me gustaria muchisimo asimismo dedicar palabras mes extensas de bienvenida a los Delegados de lengua castellana. Sin embargo, os ruego dudis de que no dejare de venir el dia cuando todo Norteamericano de educacion hablara bien el idioma de Don Quixote.

While, if the official translation is to be believed, explains:

I would like very much to be able to welcome the Spanish delegates at greater length. There is no doubt, however, that the day will come when every educated American will be able to speak Spanish.

The peroration which followed a concluding sentence in Americanese, "And what Boston WAS she will be AGAIN," was in all of the thirteen tongues present.

Hoch! Vive! Bravo! Skol! Marelton! Banzai! and Hooray!!!

NAVIGATION EXPERTS TOUR THE HARBOR AND SEE FACTORIES

The harbor experts and engineers, delegates to the twelfth international Congress of Navigation who are here as the guests of the Chamber of Commerce and the City Club, today toured the harbor on board the City Institutions boat, Monitor. All the manufacturing plants along the water front were inspected, as well as the big docks, the light houses and the city institutions on Long and Deer Islands. Descriptive literature was supplied to all the visitors, who expressed much enthusiasm over the possibilities of port development for Boston. Luncheon was served on the boat, and the excursion terminated with a visit to one of the Fore River Shipbuilding Company's plant.

Tonight's session was devoted to literary exercises, each member of the party following his own inclination and visiting what most interested him. Among the points of interest inspected were the Wachusett dam of the Metropolitan Water Works at Clinton, the coal handling plant of the New England Gas & Coke Company at Everett, the plant of the Edison Electric Illuminating Company in South Boston and the Metropolitan Park System.

This evening an informal dinner will be tendered the visitors at the City Club, and at 11 p. m. the party will board special train for Albany.

250 WORKERS ARE IMPORTED BY ELEVATED

The Boston Elevated Railroad, in anticipation of the strike, has made improvement for the employment of men to run its cars in conjunction with the employes who refuse to quit.

More than 250 new men have reached Boston from New York, Philadelphia and Newark. They went directly to the barns on Bartlett street, where a force took up their instruction. They were taught on a car with dummy appliances.

The men said they were expected to go to work at 1 a. m. tomorrow. Some said they had experience in the big car strike of Philadelphia.

The men declared they were to get $2.50 a day, with $1 additional for expenses. Many more new men are expected today. The instruction of the men is under the direction of James D. Lake.

The union men among the elevated employes met an hour after midnight in Paine Memorial Hall in their meeting. It is not decided then whether they will strike.

Employes of the road have organized a body called the Boston Elevated Fraternal Protective Association, which, it is said, has 2,500 members. President Bancroft, in a statement made public today, declared:

"The management further intends to support its legal employes in their avowed determination that no outside individual or

As they reached the stairs a lamp oil bottle in them exploded and the room below was in flames.

Smoke smothered the girl, forced his way in and awoke James A. Donovan, who then broke open with his wife and six children. Mrs. Donovan aroused all his family he could, and fled. Harriet missed her sister Josephine. The child was almost unconscious when her sister found her.

FATHER OF FOSS DIES WITH SONS AT HIS BEDSIDE

George Edmund Foss, father of the Governor, died late last night at his home at No. 8 Everett street, Jamaica Plain. The announcement was made today.

Funeral services will be held at the home of Governor Foss, No. 8 Everett street, Jamaica Plain, Saturday at 2,30 p. m.

Governor and Mrs. Foss, and Congressman George E. Foss of Chicago, brother of the Governor, were at the bedside.

Mr. Foss had been ill for some time from a complication of heart trouble and other diseases.

Governor Foss had been constantly in touch with his father's bedside and remained beside him in spite of the fact that he had expected to attend the banquet given by the Chamber of Commerce to the navigation experts at the Algonquin Club last night.

George E. Foss, father of Governor Eugene N. Foss, was eighty-two years old on June 1. He was born in Derby, Vt., in 1830 and there until his sons were grown, when he moved with his wife to Chicago, where accompanied his parents West and grew up with the country. Eugene remained in New England. That is how it happened that two brothers went to Congress, one from Illinois and the other from Massachusetts.

Mr. Foss died during his early years at West Berkshire and St. Albans, Vt. Nearly fifty years ago he married Marcia C. Noble, with whom he recently celebrated his golden wedding.

On motion of Representative Channing H. Cox the following resolution of sympathy was passed today in the House of Representatives:

Whereas, His Excellency, the Governor, Eugene N. Foss, has sustained the loss of a venerable father;

Be it resolved that the members of the House of Representatives extend to His Excellency their sincere sympathy and that the sergeant-at-arms be directed to publish the flags on the State House at half-staff for the next three days.

In January, 1911, he went to Boston to superintend the production of Puccini's opera, "The Girl of the Golden West," after performing the same labor in New York a short time previously. Ricordi was born in 1840.

S. A. CHASE, LEADER IN CHRISTIAN SCIENCE, DEAD

Stephen A. Chase, C. S. D., treasurer of the First Church of Christ (Scientist) and a member of the Christian Science Board of Directors, is dead at his home, No. 240 Hanover street, Fall River, in his seventy-third year after a brief illness.

He died at 8 a. m. today.

He became interested in Christian Science in 1884, and the following year took a course of instruction with the discoverer and founder, Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy. Soon afterward, in 1892, when the Christian Science Board of Directors was formed, Mr. Chase was made treasurer of the building fund, which was being contributed at the time for the erection of the original Mother Church building.

In 1902 Mr. Chase was made treasurer of the building fund for the extending of the original building, and the money for these two buildings, amounting to over $2,250,000 was handled by him.

CROSS-EXAMINE MANUFACTURER ABOUT BOND

Arthur W. Shaw, the Freeport (Me.) manufacturer, who, with Mrs. Georgia Stuart, is on trial before Judge Crosby in the Superior Court, charged with the theft of $10,000 from the Shaw Shoe Company, resuming the witness stand today, declared that he was very fond of Mrs. Stuart and had never tried to conceal the fact.

"When I went to Los Angeles," testified Shaw, "I wrote to her to join me there. I am very fond of Mrs. Stuart and never made any concealment of the fact.

"I told Mrs. Stuart that I could not be with her in the exigence of my business and urged me not to go away, but to stay, saying thousands had failed in business, but never alone lost property from any of the shoe corporations with which I was connected. I returned every cent of the bonds that I gave Mrs. Stuart to which there were my name. I gave her wrong bonds by mistake.

"I intended to return from Los Angeles voluntarily after a time and did not consider it necessary to run and fall to reside on a farm in New York.

"I would have come back to Maine in a few days, anyhow, but I met a real estate man and he pictured things to me in such a way that I concluded to stay, and asked Mrs. Stuart to join me."

Long Cross-Examination.

When Mr. Shaw came into testimony concerning his regard for Mrs. Stuart's favorite daughter, Carrie, was in the court room and also showed deep feeling.

Mr. Shaw was cross-examined at great length by Assistant District Attorney [illegible].

Q. Mr. Shaw, you stated in your direct testimony that the W. Shaw Corporation owed you $1,022 for loaning $180 for unpaid dividends and $6,000 due for the use of your name. You will point out

MARTIAL LAW IN CUBA; WARSHIPS AT GUANTANAMO

HAVANA, June 6.—President Gomez today issued a decree suspending constitutional guarantees throughout Cuba. This places all of Cuba under martial law. All captured negro rebels will be dealt with summarily.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—The arrival of the battleships Missouri, Minnesota, Mississippi and Ohio off Guantanamo was reported to the navy department at noon. They have anchored off the naval station with all landing boats and launches slung over side ready to send their 1,100 marines and 800 bluejackets ashore at a moment's notice.

Dispatches from United States Minister Beaupre, received at the State Department today, urged, at President Gomez's request, that the United States ship 10,000 Krag-Jorgansen rifles and 2,000,000 rounds of ammunition to Cuba instead of 5,000 rifles and 1,000,000 rounds as at first requested. The first shipment of rifles already is under way and the second shipment, following today's request, soon will follow.

This ammunition will be used to arm a volunteer guard of 10,000 Cubans for the protection of foreign property, leaving the regular army free to pursue the rebels.

President Gomez, through Minister Beaupre, today thanked the State Department for sending marines to the interior of the island, saying it would enable him the better to punish the insurgents instead of using his army to guard property.

Accordingly the State Department has requested Secretary Meyer to have the marines of the fourth division, now at Guantanamo, ready to land for patrol and police duty.

this book, which is the latest audit of your company, under the liability column, where the concern owes you any of these figures?

The defendant admitted that he was unable to find any such items under the liabilities.

Q.—Isn't it a fact, Mr. Shaw, that on January 1, 1912, you owed the company $2,285.65 on a note and that Mr. Amick owed the company $8,969.15? A.—It is.

Q.—Isn't it true, Mr. Shaw, that on January 1, 1912, you had drawn $8,000 as a salary from the corporation? A.—It is.

Q.—Now, about this $18,000 due to you on dividends. How do you figure that out?

A.—My holdings of preferred stock were $160,000, and at 6 per cent. this would give me $9,600 a year, and three years would make $18,000.

"That's My Mistake."

Q.—I admit that three times $6,000 is $18,000, but where do you get the three years when the re-organization did not take place until January 1, 1910?

A.—That is my mistake.

Q.—Then, at most, it isn't over $12,000 for dividends when you told the jury yesterday it was $18,000?

A.—It is only $12,000.

Q.—Isn't it a fact, Mr. Shaw, that you and Mr. Amick agreed not to draw any dividends until the corporation was earning a profit; and that you and Mr. Amick never did draw dividends?

A.—That is true.

Q.—You testified that with $1,826 you bought two American Telephone Company bonds. Now, where did you get that cash?

A.—I placed to the credit of the Cumberland County Shoe Company, in cash or checks, that amount. I can't remember whether it was in cash or checks, but the bookkeeper can tell.

Q.—Then you bought other bonds with the corporation money? A.—Yes.

Q.—How long had you been thinking about going away? A.—The latter part of January.

Q.—You were afraid your concern was going to fail, and wanted to get away before the crash came? A.—Yes.

"I Had That Right."

Q.—Did you think it was right to take the funds of the corporation to buy bonds?

A.—I had that right.

Q.—Did you have the right to convert these bonds to your own use? A.—I didn't do that.

Q.—Did you use the corporation's money to buy those bonds with? A.—Yes.

Q.—And then you gave these bonds to Mrs. Stuart? A.—I did not give those bonds to Mrs. Stuart.

Q.—But you testified to Mr. Vahey yesterday that you did give her six bonds bought from the corporation money? A.—I did, but it was by mistake. I meant to give her my two bonds, but gave her the six corporation bonds instead.

Q.—What did you mean by writing to Mrs. Stuart to join you in California and not to leave a cent behind, to bring the bonds and everything? A.—Those bonds were the ones that she bought and I meant the two that I had bought out of my own money.

Q.—How did you know that she had bought any bonds? A.—She wrote and told me.

Q.—With what money? A.—With the money I gave her.

Q.—Did you direct Mrs. Stuart to use the name of F. H. Courtney in opening an account in the Exchange Trust Company? A.—I did.

Q.—And you used the assumed name of Willis Courtney after you left Boston? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why did you practice this deception? A.—I did not want the name or Mrs. Stuart or my own used in connection with any banking transactions.

Mrs. Higgins Takes Children on Vacation

Surgeon in Court Protests, But Finally Yields to Divorced Wife's Plea.

Mrs. Marion Higgins, daughter of A. C. Lawrence, the millionaire leather merchant, appeared today with counsel before Judge Pierce in the equity session of the Superior Court, seeking permission to take her two children, Lawrence, aged 15, and Freeman, aged 10, to Greenwich, Conn., on a vacation.

Mrs. Higgins' husband, Dr. Frank A. Higgins of No. 384 Commonwealth avenue was recently granted a divorce for desertion. He was given temporary custody of his children. The question of permanent custodianship was deferred until Fall.

Dr. Higgins was on hand. He objected to the mother taking the children outside the State, but consented to their going with her any place within the Commonwealth. After a brief debate Dr. Higgins decided to let them go with Mrs. Higgins to Connecticut and he will later take them to the mountains.

The older boy, Lawrence, was in court with the mother.

FIGHT FOR ROOT TO HOLD CHAIR

McKinley, Taft manager, and Dixon, gave out statements of delegate strength. Dixon claims 527 for the Colonel, gives Taft 171, figures 130 unidentified, and shows that 294 have been contested.

It is the general belief here that if the Taft men carry through their program at the early sessions of the National Committee, Roosevelt will come to Chicago in person next week to direct his own fight. If he does, he will be joined by many of one of his friends to sit with the committee and try by his own personality to "put his delegates over."

Adopting rules is the important business today. The committee has heretofore operated only under temporary rules. It has decided to frame permanent laws, and a report of the committee, headed by Brooker of Connecticut, will be considered. The rules will make two things explicit: the manner of hearing contests and the limits of the term of a committeeman.

Open Sessions—Almost.

The decision to hold open sessions until the roll is called was definitely reached last night. It was decided after McKinley, Harry S. New, chairman of the committee on arrangements, and one or two others of the conservative faction held a long conference. McKinley asked, in the name of President Taft, that the public be permitted—through the newspapers—to attend the hearings. Mr. New agreed to lay the matter before the committee. Old timers members of the committee will be requested to vote for it. They will vote as requested.

This does not meet with the full approval of the Roosevelt men. Senator Dixon complains:

"We court full publicity, but this proposal is the height of foolishness. It is when the roll is called the contests are decided. When the vote is taken the public should be present."

MAX PAM ASSISTS CATHOLIC SCHOOL

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Max Pam, of Chicago, a wealthy Jewish lawyer, has given $25,000 to the Catholic University of America. In a letter to Cardinal Gibbons he inclosed a check for $5,000, and said he would give $5,000 annually for the next four years to provide scholarships at the Catholic University, provided that ecclesiastics took up social and economic problems. "False leadership," he writes, "is the chief menace to our nation. To avert it we must have men of learning and integrity."

organization shall come between themselves and the officers of the company."

The first paragraph of the statement issued by the union men reads:

The situation is such at the present time that in all probability the men will be forced to strike in the near future, and there is a possibility that such action will be taken at the meeting of the men Thursday night and Friday morning at Paine Memorial building.

The statement continues:

We have reason to believe that another large number of the oldest men in the employ of the company will join the union at the meetings, so as to be entitled to the union lockout benefit of $5 a week which is paid to all men who are members of the union previous to a strike being ordered.

Still Hope for Peace.

We have not given up hope as yet of securing a conference with the officials of the company.

All of them are asking for immediate action, and all called attention to the tactics of the company officials, who are constantly piling on cars, trying in every conceivable way to intimidate the men to a sufficient extent to cause them to withdraw from the union. In many instances, it was reported, the officials have even gone as far as to tell the men that the only hope they have of retaining their positions is by withdrawing from the bona fide trade union and making application for and becoming a member of Mr. Bancroft's union.

It is true that Mr. Bancroft calls it an employes' organization, but as it is officered and fostered by officers of the company, and all the men thoroughly understand the situation and know that with but few exceptions the men who attend its meetings are largely union men and that all go because they believe that a failure on their part to comply with the request, and in most instances the demand of the officers of the company to go to them, would result in their dismissal.

Meeting of "Loyal Men."

The members of the loyal organization held three meetings at which their side of the controversy was strongly advocated by speakers employed on the L road. One of the meetings was held in the car barns on Ashmont street, in Dorchester. This was attended by about 500 men.

The principal address here was made by William W. Fagan, who is the president of the organization. He urged the men to co-operate with the company for their best interests.

A second meeting was held at Grove Hall. This was attended by about 300 employes. They indorsed the sentiments of the speaker, which were to the effect that it would be better for all concerned to remain loyal to the railroad.

RICHIE A DEAR, SAYS ANNETTE

LONDON, June 6.—Annette Kellerman, the "diving Venus," who is filling a vaudeville engagement in London, seemed genuinely amazed and thoroughly annoyed when told of this rumors that Richard Crocker wished to adopt her as his daughter. The story was based on the fact of her having been seen two days in succession in Mr. Croker's box at the theatre.

"It is the most ridiculous story I have ever heard," Miss Kellerman exclaimed. "It simply staggers me. Uncle Richie is the dearest old man I ever met, but my great friend of the family is his niece, Mrs. Stella Bowman, whom I met on the Adriatic."

I am giving her physical culture exercises. We became very friendly. She invited me to stay at Glencairn for two days. I stayed three weeks afterward and Mrs. Bowman gave me the happiest three weeks of my life in London. sincerely hope this report will not break our friendship, but she will understand how absurd this story is. They invited me to their Derby box and also to the Oaks on Friday, and to stay at Glencairn during the Dublin horse show week-end.

Having expressed herself with indignation at the rumor, Miss Kellerman took from her purse a telegram dated May 29, on which day she made her first appearance at the Oxford Music Hall. The telegram was from Dublin and read:

"Sent flowers from here this morning. May your success break all records. Will see you June 2. Love from Glencairn. Stella."

Glencairn is Mr. Croker's residence in Ireland.

MRS. GRACE WARREN; DIAGRAM SHOWS STRANGE OPERATION

The removal of a strip of her skull three and a half inches long and half an inch wide, where it had been depressed by an old bullet wound, has restored to sanity and health Mrs. Grace L. Warren of Lynn, for some time an inmate of the Danvers Insane Hospital. The operation was performed at Danvers by Drs. C. D. S. Lovell and George H. Gray of Lynn.

Mrs. Warren is thirty-four, the wife of Alfred Warren of No. 24 Elm street, Lynn. She is her second husband. In 1899 her first husband, Edgar Statham of Wakefield, shot her at their home in that town. She was wounded badly, but the bullet did not penetrate her brain and she recovered. Statham was sentenced to a term in State Prison.

After her second marriage Mrs. Warren's mind became deranged. She had been reading books on occult sciences, and became convinced that she was the spiritual wife and would eventually become the real wife of Professor Grumbine, whose pupil she had been. Professor Grumbine, Mrs. Warren's friends say, is a lecturer, exponent of universal religion, and leader of a cult known as the "Order of the White Rose." Finally she was committed to Danvers.

On March 2 Mrs. Warren and a Mrs. Addie Gordon of Malden escaped. They were located in Providence but escaped and went to New York. Mrs. Warren was located there in April. A few weeks later she again escaped and was found in Cleveland, O., where she told the authorities she was seeking Professor Grumbine. She was returned to Danvers.

The operation indicated that Mrs. Warren's mental trouble was due to a pressure of a part of the skull upon the brain. At the point where the bullet had struck the skull was half an inch thick.

WILLOW PLUME LEADS AT DERBY

(An analysis of the fashions seen at the Derby by an American woman from the viewpoint of a box in the grand stand.)

EPSOM DOWNS, Eng., June 6.—The willow plume was queen of the Derby—the poor, drooping, ineffective willow, cast off by the women of Fifth avenue two years ago, and sent into the discard by Broadway actresses before them, is seen bobbed up at Epsom Downs as the one conspicuous feminine decoration of the classic racing event.

From the crowded box, as far as I could see in every direction, I was confronted with a swaying, willow field of the plume of America's yesterday of fashion. To my right the boxes of the jockey club, with the royal inclosure holding the ultra fashionables of Merry England, contained thousands of plumes, tastefully placed and drawn on at every possible grotesque angle. The grand stand, with its heavy sprinkling of Americans, French women and south American, was rather a trifling sight. Beyond that, to the left, willow plumes continued, disjointed, in a harmonious way, along the line of cheaper stands out into the fields.

After the plumes, came dress of almost common attire, although the colors were varied and in some instances the decorations were slightly original. In this particular fashion, a semi-tailored suit, which was neither nor narrow at the bottom, with an inverted pleat in the back, was the pattern followed by hundreds at the course. But the exceptions, to what seemed to be the general rule, were sufficiently numerous to be cited.

Queen Wears Willow Plume.

In due observance of English custom, I must first present Queen Mary, as the interested observer, who sat well in front of the crimson-lined royal box beneath a bobbing white willow plume arranged for the purpose and gold colors of the royal house, extending around the course. The English queen wore a gray suit of the extremely long train, which fell in wide folds about her feet. Her train was so fitted to her figure with a lace lonpie. A long gray chatelaine coat, also closely and kept the gown rather well covered. Her hat was a rigidly straight sailor shape with three willow ostriches among the crown and three feathers to the left to accentuate her height.

The queen sat close beside King George, who wore a dark gray overcoat and riding dress, with a white carnation in his buttonhole. The king wears this lining for his black silk hat instead of the gray silk, in which a number of members of the Jockey Club appeared.

In close proximity to the royal enclosure, the Duchess of Haudington, Lady Gaga Gordon, Ladies in waiting to the Queen, and ladies who wished to be in waiting were seated. One of the ladies in the queen's suite wore a gray tailored coat, which hung as low as the heels of her slipper. A large gray hat of coarse straw, covered with orchids and violets covered her head.

Lady Essie Gordon wore a navy blue charmeuse gown with a coat which extended no further than her hips. Her blue straw hat, with blue feathers, made her one of the striking figures in the clubhouse stands.

The ladies' gown was in a woeful minority in a few smart boxes at the Derby. Although the most fashionable dressed productions have featured the passion gown heavily, this Derby with but few exceptions, could not be found at Epsom.

Annette Kellermann With Crokers.

Annette Kellermann, is a good looking green skirted sylvia from the royal menage of the Croker party, together with Mrs. Stella Bowman, niece of the former Tammany chief.

Mrs. Bowman wore a two-piece suit of black satin and a white straw hat.

The prettiest girl in the grandstand was Malvina Longfellow, an American actress, in a smart black and white suit, with white hat trimmed in algrette. Charlotte Lyon, Lady Gaga Gordon, Rosie Boote and a few other actresses known in America were conspicuous in the grandstand, but the prettiest color combination I've seen in many a day was worked out by a girl in the uniform worn by the American jockey who rode Sweeper II, without realizing that the designer of this particular suit sounded the vogue in colors for the coming fall season in America.

AUCTION BABY AT CHURCH FETE

NEW YORK, June 6.—The announcement published in a Jersey City newspaper setting forth that a "mourning baby boy" would be competed for as a prize at a party given by the conference of St. Anne's Society of the Visitation of Our Lady, aroused a storm among the officials of church and State and scores of unofficial readers.

"A baby to be given away as a prize—perhaps raffled off, or sold to the highest bidder? What was Jersey City coming to?"

Ever since the announcement appeared, Father Mulhall of St. Anne's Church, has been target for protests, demands, appeals and inquiries.

All who appeared were welcomed. They received all the information they asked—and more. They were told first that the baby was only a baby pig. Then they were informed the conference was raising funds for good purposes, and they would be privileged to help if they chose. Most of them, still stunned by the effect of the pig, yielded goodly donations.

The entertainment itself was also highly profitable.

TAWNEY SEES END OF COLONEL

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Tawney, who for the past ten days has been Taft's mainstay and best support is off for Chicago. His voice will be potent in tact about the National committee and he is the iron hand in form of steam roller methods. Tawney is the only one about Taft whose courage and fighting heart are as desperately indomitable as Roosevelt's. Should the Taft lines in Chicago show signs of wavering his presence will go far toward holding them steady.

Tawney and others among the anti-Roosevelt people saw Taft yesterday. Taft is still trying anxiously to get out of the pit, having had enough of the fighting. They explained to him, however, that failing every effort to find a substitute on earth they must see him here in the convention.

Taft has no power any heart, as now exists, and is coming away from the White House.

Opposing Roosevelt with Taft is like opposing a thunderbolt with a bale of hay.

As Tawney was about to depart I asked him for his views on Roosevelt. They would add to the gayety of nations though they served no other turn. Said Tawney:

"My opposition to Roosevelt is neither personal nor partisan. It is based on principle. I do not want to see the country Mexicanized. He will be taken to the jaws is coming and is already upon the capitol. The whole thing is become an impossibility. He is a dictator by desire. Men are by nature ruled by it; he was born that way. Very well. He could say as much in defense of Napoleon and Bismarck. I've watched Roosevelt for seven years. He refuses to break the law, defy the law. He cares no more for law than a cow cares for a new gate. He will not intervene like a fence between him and his desires. He pushes down a panel of that law fence and goes cross lots whenever right.

"What did he do in the Tennessee Coal & Iron matter? Didn't he defy and break the law? His pretence was that he wanted to avert a panic. That was an excuse. A panic now indeed outside his own concerned imagination. The whole sum concerned itself upon his intense willingness to disregard the law and play the dictator.

"When there were those commissions which he created without authority of law and in the teeth of law—his coronation commission, his President's home commission, his country life commission, his forest commission. Having named them illegally he could steal clerks out of the various departments to work for them illegally. There were 135 clerks working for the forest conservation alone. That stolen clerk hire amounted to hundreds of thousands of dollars.

BEAUTY HINTS

Superfluous Hair

Can you tell me if there is really any way to permanently destroy a blonde, growing growth of superfluous hair on my face and arms? I am 36 years old and the growth is very bad. My daughter, also is 22, is similarly troubled and cannot wear short sleeves or low necked gowns. Depilatories seem to be worthless, and I am told that although the electric needle sometimes effective, it is very costly and painful. I should be thankful if you would give me your advice. MRS. M. M.

You are wise to avoid the electric needle. It is a dangerous operation, and, besides being painful, often leaves scars. I have frequently stated in these columns that it is better to endure the annoyance than to suffer the torture of the electric needle. I have also warned readers against depilatories, which are worse than useless because they cause the hair to grow out thicker than before.

Recently, however, I have come in contact with a method based upon scientific principles, the discovery of an eminent professor of chemistry in an English university, which is how being introduced into this country, and you will write to Elmer Chapin, Box 1716 B. W. 23d st., Cincinnati, O., he will send you free and postage paid, a booklet telling all about this method, which will enable every reader of you to be permanently free from all traces of this annoying growth. "Butt Killed by Fall, Stead Died in Room"

Madame de Meissner Gives Further Details of Spirit Conversation With Heroes of the Titanic.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 6.—Madame Sophie Radford de Meissner, widow of the late secretary of the Russian legation in Washington, has added some details to her first report of spirit conversations she had with Major Archibald Butt and William T. Stead, who went down on the Titanic. She thinks Major Butt was killed in falling.

"I was standing on the deck and I fell forward into the gulf," she says Major Butt told her.

"And when I came to myself I was standing here on the grass," he added.

"Can you give a description of the last moment of consciousness here and the first moment of consciousness beyond the grave, as experienced by Major Butt?" Madame de Meissner was asked.

"I think he told me all, when he said 'at he fell, and on making stood on the grass," she replied. "I believe, therefore, that he was killed by the fall.

William T. Stead, Mme. de Meissner thinks, died in his room.

"I simply went from my cabin to the beyond; I never suffered at all," is what Mr. Stead told Mme. de Meissner.

"This leads me to believe that Mr. Stead died in his room," she declared.

CATCH 492 TROUT ALL OVER 6 INCHES

PITTSFIELD, June 6.—With 492 trout, all over six inches in length, Edwin K. McPeck, of Adams, returned to this city after a trip to Savoy with three other men, holding the record of 1912 for Berkshire. Mr. McPeck started that after fishing all morning and up to 2:15 in the afternoon, every man in the party had his basket filled and he alone pulled ten of the speckled beauties out of one hole to finish the day's sport.

SENATOR NIXON OF NEVADA DEAD

WASHINGTON, June 6.—United States Senator Nixon of Nevada is dead here. He was one of the most conspicuous magnates in the West, having acquired large interests at Reno, Goldfield and elsewhere. He was attacked by magazine writers on account of the methods by which they claimed he acquired his fortune, for he was rated as several times a millionaire, with a personal following unequalled by that of any other man in his State.

Easy to Have Fair Skin and Pretty Hair

The hair and scalp can be kept immaculately clean and set off to advantage by occasionally shampooing with a tenspoonful of canthrox dissolved in a cup of hot water. This quick-drying shampoo dissolves every particle of dust, dandruff and excess oil, and restores the former even color and brilliance to faded, lifeless hair. Because of its invigorating action, canthrox will encourage the growth of long, beautiful hair.

A highly satisfactory lotion for the skin is made by dissolving 4 ounces of spurmax in 1 pint witch hazel (or hot water), then adding 2 teaspoonfuls glycerine. When applied to the skin it is invisible, and its regular use will banish the oily, "muddy," blotchy complexion so fatal to any complexion. When used on the daintiest skin it will impart an added richness not thought possible.

CLARK HAS 459 PLEDGED

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., June 6.—Following his victory in Louisiana and West Virginia yesterday, Champ Clark has made a clean sweep of the regular delegates from Arkansas. The delegates will be instructed to vote for the nomination of Champ Clark "as long as his name is before the convention."

The fourteen district delegates will be chosen tomorrow, and the delegates-at-large will be chosen by the convention later, but the Clark resolution was adopted by the convention today.

This latest victory gives Clark 459 instructed delegates, almost a two to one lead over his nearest opponent, Governor Wilson, who has 252.

This total for Clark includes only thirteen of the twenty delegates from Louisiana, and does not include any from Pennsylvania. Some of the Pennsylvania delegates are doubtful as to their Wilson adherency.

In the total of 252 for Wilson there are included the 76 from Pennsylvania, 7 from Louisiana and the 19 from South Dakota. Underwood now has 84 instructed delegates, Harmon 50, Marshall 26, Baldwin 10 and Burke 10.

In the convention here yesterday, while United States Senator James P. Clarke was speaking, some one shouted: "What about Bryan?" Mr. Clarke replied:

"If Mr. Bryan could give some sign of usefulness and quit going about the country attacking good Democrats he would render signal service to his party."

United States Senator Jeff Davis announced that he had changed his mind and would not retire from politics, as he had intended.

The Wilson adherents made a feeble attempt to gag the anti rule resolution, but their opposition was feeble and futile. As soon as the resolution had been carried, Senator Jimmy Clark, a son of the Speaker, went to the platform, and was hailed with enthusiastic cheering.

ROCKEFELLER TO PAY TAX ON EMPLOYE'S DOG

CLEVELAND, June 6.—John D. Rockefeller will have to pay taxes on a little white and brown English fox terrier which turned up at the Rockefeller home at Forest Hill about six months ago and was adopted by "Ed" Lynch, one of the employes. The dog is listed at $5 in John D's personal tax return, filed on Monday. It belongs, however, to Albert Holliday a watchman. Employes only grinned today when it was noticed that a dog had been listed on the tax return of their "boss" and that the millionaire would have to pay taxes on it.

"Peroxide Beauty Hints"

THE TEETH

Being a Deliberate Attempt to Tell You What You Don't Know About Your Teeth

The real secret of Dentyne Peroxide is that it liberates oxygen at the time of use. A very simple way to demonstrate this is to put some water in a glass and put in it a small quantity of Dentyne Peroxide—paste or powder. In a few seconds you will see the oxygen rising to the surface.

And this is what this demonstration proves.

Oxygen is the one thing that acts as a disinfectant, deodorizer and prophylactic, and Dentyne Peroxide is the one preparation that contains the proper quantity of oxygen to bleach the teeth and keep both teeth, gums and mouth in a sweet, healthy and happy condition.

Ask any Riker-Jaynes Drug Store to prove our statements to you. (To be continued.)

Rheumatics No Longer Dread Changeable Weather

The prescription, "Nurito," free from Opiates and Narcotics, found to be the antidote to uric acid, gives remarkable results, almost immediate relief and an absolute, quick cure to rheumatic sufferers. This is now testified to by many Boston sufferers, and what is better than home testimony? SCULPTOR REPLIES TO MRS. SAINT GAUDENS

George C. Gassiere, the Chicago sculptor who made a copy of the Chicago Saint Gaudens statue of Lincoln for presentation by the Chicago Chamber of Commerce to the Boston Chamber of Commerce, today in Chicago defended himself against the criticisms of his work made by Mrs. Saint Gaudens at the Boston Chamber of Commerce, yesterday. Mrs. Saint Gaudens lives in Boston.

The sculptor said his work had been passed on favorably by prominent sculptors and art critics. He said he had worked for impressions, in making the copy, rather than for exact reproductions.

In a half-size copy of a statue, Mr. Gassiere said, such things as the folds of a garment are likely to be slightly different from the original.

Sculptor Defends Work.

Mr. Gassiere made this statement:

Mrs. St. Gaudens has gone out of her way to criticise my copy. I make that statement because she has found fault with none of the important parts of the copy. I expected Mrs. St. Gaudens would find fault with my work. When she learned that the Association of Commerce intended having a copy of the statue made, she wrote to Francis Simmons, president of the Lincoln Park Commissioners; William M. R. French, director of the Art Institute, and Lorado Taft, objecting to a copy being made of the Lincoln statue. It was ascertained, however, that there were no legal impediment in the way of making the copy, and we went ahead.

Her belligerent attitude toward artists, sculptors and others that has been in evidence since her husband's death, made me feel that she would never look on a copy with favor. When the Saint Gaudens exhibit was made in the Art Institute several years ago, she criticised Director French on its arrangement.

Lorado Taft and Leonard Crunelle, another Chicago sculptor, were on the committee that accepted the copy. Both complimented me highly and said that it was as good as could be done. Mr. Simmons, who is a fine judge of art and has seen all the principal works of sculpture in this country and abroad, was more than satisfied with what I had done.

I, myself, believe the work to be very good. I have done many statues of Lincoln; I have studied his character and anatomy from the sculptor's standpoint, and I felt that I was more than competent to make the copy.

I did not take actual measurements, but worked from impressions mostly.

Calls Widow Mistaken.

Homer A. Stillwell, one of the Chicago committee who came to Boston to present the Lincoln replica, said Mrs. Saint Gaudens was mistaken in thinking the statue could not be copied without her permission. He said that copyright was the property of the Lincoln Park Board.

Lorado Taft said he and Saint Gaudens would approve of the copy.

President L. W. Kinkaid of the Chicago Association of Commerce said the copy had been approved by the best critics in the country and that he could not understand the attitude of the sculptor's widow unless it was because she had not been consulted.

THOUSANDS JOIN BELGIAN STRIKERS; RIOTING CONTINUES

BRUSSELS, June 6.—The political outlook throughout Belgium threatened a crisis today, while the labor situation which has arisen through the post-election riots is growing more serious. There was continuous fighting in the coal districts. Heavy bodies of troops were moved throughout the empire. In the commune of Mons three rapid-fire guns have been scattered through mining villages. The strike called by Socialists after their defeat by Clericals at the polls is growing. A general strike was declared today at Liege and Borinage. At Lalouviere 15,000 men are out. Five thousand men quit work at Charleroi. Thousands of workmen are idle in this city, at Antwerp and Ghent. The glass workers are joining in the walkout. From Antwerp comes a report that a Clerical leader was killed in a village near that city in a mob. Nonofficial reports of tralns being attacked are received. In many quarters churches, schools and clubs are under guard.

FRESH POLICE STOP NIGHT DOCK RIOTS

LONDON, June 6.—Twelve hours of clearing at Surrey docks are brought to an end early today when tarce fresh pitchoons of police were thrown against the unruly transport strikers. The strikers, who had been on duty all night, were exhausted from forty consecutive hours of the rioters. A hotel was wrecked and hundreds of windows were broken in warehouses and other buildings.

LOCALIZED BY RED CRESCENT SIGNS

Extraordinary values have trade-drawing power. Therefore, our aisles will seethe with business Friday.

Lively lines have left limping items. Complete stocks are greedy for space. We've lifted depleted and exhausted assortments from many of our Specialty Stores and grouped them on tables. You'll know them by the Red Crescent Signs—or by the thickening crowds.

They are underpriced, but unadvertised because quantities are limited.

THE SIGN OF THE RED CRESCENT IS THE EMBLEM OF EXTRA ECONOMY

Each article marked by the quarter-moon symbol is worthy and desirable, otherwise its companions would not now be gone, leaving it lonely and let down in price.

This innovation is another illustration of genius in service that gives the SHEPARD STORE its leadership. Every Red Crescent Sign is a center of saving—a rallying point for thrifty buyers. Popular items originally low are now still lower for no other reason than that they were popular.

LEGISLATORS CALL FALL RE-ELECTED

SANTA FE, N. M., June 6.—A surprise was sprung at a session of the State Senate when the sergeant-at-arms locked the doors, and the Senate, overruling its presiding officer, declared itself in joint session with the House. Eighteen members of the House were present and a ballot resulted in 32 votes for the reelection of United States Senator Albert B. Fall.

It is said the Democrats of the Senate will meet with the House majority today and elect someone else.

"BEAUTY SQUAD" TO WAR ON HATPINS

CHICAGO, June 6.—Chicago is to have "a beauty squad" of women in the police department. Chief McWeeny made this announcement after being told that the policemen were "too bashful" to enforce the hatpin ordinance. "I will organize a 'beauty squad' of twenty attractive society and club women of Chicago to aid in the enforcement of the new ordinance," said the chief.

LONGWORTH HAS NO "BEATEN" BUTTONS

WASHINGTON, June 6.—An apparently guileless old man wrote this on a card and sent it to Representative Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of Colonel Roosevelt: "Where can I get one of those buttons reading, 'We know when we're beat?' I know nothing about them," was the answer sent verbally by Mr. Longworth.

MASCIOLI PAYS DEATH PENALTY

Enrico Mascioli died in the electric chair at the State Prison in Charlestown, at 12:13:34 this morning, for the murder of Frank Cusumano. He went to his death bravely. Within fifty-eight seconds from the time he passed through the door leading to the execution chamber, he was dead. It was one of the most successful executions ever held at the prison.

Two priests attended him to the end. Rev. Fr. Vitorria Gregori, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church, North square, Boston, acted as his spiritual adviser and father confessor. He worked with the condemned man from 10 o'clock yesterday morning until 9 o'clock last night.

Rev. Michael J. Murphy, Catholic chaplain of the prison, also spent many hours in the death cell. It was he who, with crucifix upraised, led the march to the electric chair.

While Father Gregori chanted in Italian from the Bible, a prayer known as the "Last Agony," Mascioli three times kissed the crucifix which Rev. Father Murphy held to his lips.

"I'll Go to Death Alone."

Mascioli walked to the chair unsupported. He refused the aid tendered him by the prison guards. When Deputy Warden Allen went to the death cell, eight minutes after midnight, and said, "Come, Harry, we are ready, are you prepared?" Mascioli arose from the narrow cot on which he had been resting, and answered: "Yes, I will go with you."

As he came through the cell door, two of the guards attempted to grasp him by the arms for the purpose of assisting him, if he showed any signs of weakness. He said to the guards, "there is no need of it. I'll go to my death bravely."

Father Murphy said to him as they were starting for the death chamber, "Harry, remember, keep your mind on God absolutely." Mascioli remembered.

Never has such a small number of witnesses been present at an execution in this State. Those present were Surgeon-General Charles C. Foster, representing the Commonwealth; Dr. Joseph L. McLaughlin, the prison physician; Dr. George B. Magrath, medical examiner for Suffolk County; William J. Shea, representing the press; Warden Bridges, whose duty it is to flash the signal for the current; Deputy Warden Allen, who notified the condemned man that the time for the march of death had arrived; the four prison guards, who strap the man into the chair; the two priests and the electrician.

No official from Plymouth County, where Mascioli was convicted, came to witness the collecting of the toll that the law demanded.

Witnesses Arrive.

The execution was marked by the absence of the usual throng that gathers about the gates of the prison. Only a few police officers who came to drive away the crowd that never came, the chauffeurs of the automobiles that brought the witnesses, and some newspapermen, were gathered about the gates.

First came the doctors. They arrived singly. It was within fifteen minutes of the hour of midnight before Dr. McLaughlin, the prison physician, came. Within five minutes Surgeon-General Foster followed. Medical Examiner Magrath followed him two minutes later.

The witnesses gathered in the warden's office. At midnight they started for the death chamber. As they arrived at the heavy iron door of the death house, the warden rapped a signal with his cane to the guards within. Slowly the door was swung open. The doctors and guards followed in after the warden. A glaring light that illuminated the corridor and execution chamber dimmed their sight for a few moments.

ORPHANS TAKE TRIP TO INDIA

All the little orphans and cripples in Boston are going to take a trip to India next Saturday morning, as guests of the AMERICAN, and they will not have to take a forty-day boat ride to see the wonders of that mysterious land. All they will have to do will be to sit in comfortable chairs at Tremont Temple and have India brought to them by means of the famous kinemacolor pictures in the colors of nature, and they see fifty times as much as most visitors do, traveling as they will with the royal party, even seeing King George and Queen Mary of England crowned as Emperor and Empress of Hindostan.

Every minute of time from the landing of the King and Queen at Bombay to their departure two months later seemed to have something of interest crowded into it. At Bombay they attended a children's festival, where 67,000 little tots were assembled to greet the sovereigns and go through all sorts of dances and exercises in their honor. Pageants and processions followed each other in quick succession, while the military display was the greatest in the history of the whole world.

Perhaps the greatest joy of the little folks will be the animals—no country in the world has so many interesting beasts.

A big orchestra accompanies the various ceremonials, and Manager Hosmer has also some surprises in store for the little ones that they will be delighted with.

18 SISTERS GIVEN DEGREES; FIRST TO WOMEN IN 400 YEARS

WASHINGTON, June 6.—Eighteen sisters, representatives of seven leading teaching communities, were awarded the baccalaureate in art at the commencement exercises of the Teachers' College of the Catholic University of America here—the first women to be so honored in 400 years.

The recipients of the honor surpassed all previous marks of scholastic attainments for a like degree given to men by the university. The award was the first since similar awards were made by the University of Bologna, in Italy, 400 years ago.

The candidates were presented their degrees by Dr. Thomas Edward Shields, dean of the Sisters' College.

GRAND TRUNK BILL TO FOSS

The Grand Trunk Railroad Bill, which will permit that railroad to extend its system to Boston, will reach Governor Foss today. It is expected that he will attach his signature to it at once making the bill a law at once.

The bill has been engrossed, a proceeding that required six hours' work, and it goes to both House and Senate for enactment. As both House and Senate have approved of it in its present form the work of enactment only requires a moment's time.

Immediately after the bill becomes a law it is expected that the actual work in the construction of the extension of the railroad to Boston will begin.

In a letter advocating electrification and the building of a tunnel between the North and the South Stations, Governor Foss says:

The Governor's Statement.

"The bill now pending does not give the people all that I desire for them, or all that I recommended; but it is a long step in the right direction. I believe it is the most important piece of railroad legislation in years.

"The bill provides for compulsory electrification of the railroad lines within the Metropolitan District; it provides for a connection of the two great railroad systems by a tunnel across the city of Boston; it leaves the construction of this tunnel subject to the voters of Boston upon a referendum at the next election; it gives the Railroad Commission mandatory power in regard to fares, rates, service and equipment of railroads; it provides the Railroad Commission with competent counsel to handle the many intricate questions of railroad law which constantly confront it; and it gives the commission the necessary office machinery in the way of assistants, engineers, attorneys, accountants, statisticians, etc., to enforce the provisions of the new act.

Question of Electrification.

"The substitute bill passed by the Senate, while increasing the powers of the Railroad Commission, does not increase its membership, which I still believe to be absolutely necessary; for there is work enough for the additional number.

"If the people are to have electrification of railroads and the tunnel, and a strong transportation commission, with mandatory powers to compel the railroads to do their duty, and if they are to have better telephone service—then the people have got to go after their Senators and Representatives. I want every public-spirited citizen to help this work along.

"There is a tremendous fight on for the people as against the selfish and avaricious corporate interests, which do not want a powerful transportation commission established, and do not want to render any better service than they have to. If we are to have better service, we must be on our guard against undue corporate influence.

"If the people of the Metropolitan District desire to be treated as the best commercial and industrial interests of this metropolitan city demand, it will be necessary for all public-spirited citizens to exert every proper influence possible upon the General Court within the next twenty-four hours for its accomplishment."

PUT HANDS UP TOO LATE AND GOT SHOT

CORRY, Pa., June 6.—Not quick enough to respond to a demand of "hands up" on an Erie railroad freight near here early today, Thomas Sullivan of New York was shot three times and fatally injured. He was taken to a Jamestown, N. Y., hospital. Four men were arrested charged with the crime.

Agrees Boston Is 'Stiff and Chilly' Radcliffe Girl Discusses Kennard

MISS GILMAN SAYS HE HAD NO BUSINESS GETTING ENGAGED.

The social scamper in Boston is a crawl compared to the fresh and frenzied excitement found in Western cities.

A mother has a right to keep her son under supervision as long as she is paying most of his living expenses.

The best type of young man doesn't get engaged to a nice girl when he is himself dependent.

I believe that it is up to the girl to contribute her share toward the savings for a home.

Most so-called "society girls" vegetate.

There is a great waste of good material among the homes on the water side of Beacon street.

As for young Mr. Kennard—if he really finds his mother more fascinating than his fiancee, no girl ought to blame him.

These are some of the striking statements in an interview with Miss Dorothy F. Gilman editor-in-chief of the Radcliffe Magazine and a leader among Radcliffe students.

Miss Gilman commented on the Manierre-Kennard engagement tangle. If Miss Manierre found young Kennard too puritanical, all right, says Miss Gilman.

MISS DOROTHY F. GILMAN.

Radcliffe's sympathies are with Miss Manierre, and young Kennard Miss Gilman condemns for "engaging himself to a nice girl when he is self-supporting."

"It's not so awfully surprising," said Miss Gilman, who comes from Canton, "that Miss Manierre found Boston society stiff and chilly. Boston society is just that. The 'social scamper' here is a crawl compared to the whirl of fresh and frenzied excitement found in the Western cities.

"As for Kennard's being 'tied to his mother's apron strings,' isn't it natural enough that the mother of a young man who is unable to pay for more than one carfare should want to keep him under supervision? I certainly should.

"Most girls of the present day imagine that their claims on their fiance come ahead of those of the man's own family. Of course, that is perfectly proper if the young man in question is making enough to support two. But what generally happens with such early engagements is that the young fellow can't even support himself.

"The best type of young man doesn't get engaged to a nice girl when he is absolutely dependent on his family. Still, with the high cost of living of the present day, I believe it is up to the girl to contribute her share toward the savings for a home.

"In France a girl has to bring her husband a 'dot' and such a contribution is thought natural and necessary in all walks of French society. Why shouldn't our American girls do their share? Of course, many of them do, and gladly. But, unfortunately, some of those who have had the greatest advantages in fashionable schools and in colleges return home to vegetate.

"Most so-called 'society girls' do vegetate, anyway. But they are not the best American women, for which we may be thankful.

"Such girls, however, when they take advantage of their opportunities, often come out ahead, which is not surprising. But there is a great waste of good material in some of the homes on the water side of Beacon street.

"As for young Mr. Kennard, if he really feels the charm of his mother's presence is more fascinating than that of his late fiancee no girl ought to blame him."

MISS MANIERRE GETS PROPOSALS

CHICAGO, June 6.—Scores of hopeful swains who avow that they are neither "tied to mother's apron strings," or "sentimental," or "slow and poky," have proposed to Miss Wilhelmina Manierre since the announcement that her engagement to Reginald P. Kennard of Boston has been broken. The proposals have all come through the mails.

One of the proposals came from a Hoosier poet. It consisted of twelve six-line stanzas and caused a good laugh. The metre was correct and it was signed "A Hoosier Poet." The last line of each stanza was something descriptive of apron strings. One was "Frayed and frazzled apron strings." Another was "Plain and gingham apron strings." In the last verse apron strings was rhymed with "wedding things." Mr. Manierre said it might be preserved. The other proposals were along the same lines, though not in verse.

Mr. Manierre resented statements to different papers about the case.

"We were informed last night," he said, "that a story had gained circulation to the effect that my daughter Wilhelmina had offered to settle $200,000 upon Mr. Kennard if the match were to carry her. At once communicated with him, asking if he or anyone in his family had made such a ridiculous statement. In reply Miss Wilhelmina received a telegram from Mr. Kennary.

"Your telegram received. Victor writing your father. Don't worry. REX."

Victor is Mr. Kennard's brother. Rex is his own nickname.

"This deplorable affair has been treated throughout in a most unfair way." Miss Julia Manierre, sister of Wilhelmina, declared. "It is as though the two dogs were put to fighting and told to fight. There are no bad feelings between the two families. We feel for our brother in his misunderstanding. Wilhelmina has been placed in an unenviable position. It has been made to appear as though she had broken two engagements with Mr. Kennard, which of course is untrue. It is on her account that we deplore the whole affair."

TAKING WEEK'S HONEYMOON ON ORDER OF COURT

NEW YORK, June 6.—T. J. O'Neil, a lawyer of this city, is off on a honeymoon of a week on orders of the court. O'Neil asked Supreme Court Justice Platzek for a three days' adjournment of a case which came up for trial before him, on the ground he was about to be married and he wished not to be deprived of a wedding trip.

O'Neil's specific request was denied by the court, which ruled there was no justification and a week none too much for a man about to be married.

"There should be a law," said the justice, "compelling a newly wed man to take a week off."

BURGESS LICENSED TO FLY HYDRO-AEROPLANE

W. Starling Burgess of Marblehead holds the first aviator's license to be granted an operator of a hydro-aeroplane in New England. The designer flew to a height of 300 feet over Marblehead harbor and then completed the necessary three figure eights. The final test, that of gliding to the water with engine cut off, was successfully completed, the distance from the designated point to the point of contact with the water being but 114 feet, according to measurements of Professor Wilson with his sextant.

GRAND TRUNK RAISES FIREMEN'S WAGES

MONTREAL, June 6.—The Grand Trunk Railway has increased the wages of firemen from this change to Portland, Me. The old mileage rate of $2 to $2.70 per 100 miles, according to the class of work, has been exchanged for a mileage schedule of from $2.15 to $2.90, today's announcement stated. Within these limits the increase is from 10 to 30 cents per 100. miles. The monthly rate of pay on the road will be from $75 to $80 instead of $72 to $78.

DOCTORS MAY SPEED THEIR AUTOS WHEN RACING THE STORK

NEW YORK, June 6.—In the future a doctor may open his throttle on his auto wide open when racing with the stork. This is the ruling of Police Magistrate Dodd, who admitted personal interest in the subject when two physicians were arraigned for going at top speed through Brooklyn thoroughfares last night. They made the plea of justifiable hurry.

"Officer," said the magistrate, turning to the policeman who made the arrest, "you ought to exercise leniency in such cases. When a physician is racing with the stork he is justified in putting on speed. The subject is one in which I am keenly interested for the stork brought the finest baby boy in the world to my house last Monday night."

The prisoners were discharged.

Rothschild Gives $132,000 for Pastel

PARIS, June 6.—The first session of the sale at the George Petit gallery of the collection of Jacques Doucet, a fashionable dressmaker, brought $128,750.

Not one of the works sold was a painting. The auctioneer forewarned were the most persistent ones—drawing, water color and pastel.

If the $105,000 paid for Reynolds's "Sidonie" is a stupendous price, then the $132,000 given for the Baron Henri Rothschild for a pastel, which owes its permanence to glue, creates the need of some other distinctive superlative.

Tip Taking Stopped, Says Strike Followed

Walter D. Jackson, proprietor of the Hotel Olympia, today declared that his waiters struck simply because he refused to allow tip taking.

"I was willing to pay the waiters a minimum wage of $15 a week with meals. If they refused to take tips, but they called a strike and are still out," is the statement made by Mr. Jackson.

John J. Kearney, business agent of Waiters' Union No. 80, declares that the strike was called because Mr. Jackson had displaced union men with non-union women.

Here's what the friends of one of the latest candidates, Miss Josephine M. Murray of No. 37 Dale street, Roxbury, have to say:

Dear Editor:

Enclosed find 100 votes for Miss Josephine M. Murray, and also photograph. We all sincerely trust Miss Murray will be a winner. If Roxbury boys and girls "get busy" we will have a Roxbury girl winner. Miss Murray has been very prominent in amateur theatricals, etc., and in the past minstrel show of Shepard, Norwell Co., Winter street.

Miss Murray is employed by the Shepard, Norwell Company on Winter street, and her friends insist they have in their candidate "New England's Princess."

Josephine Murray, Roxbury Candidate.

MORE LIGHT ON DARROW CHECKS

LOS ANGELES, June 6.—Further evidence regarding the checks alleged to have been sent to attorneys for the McNamara defence was expected when the trial of Clarence Darrow, charged with bribery of a juror in the McNamara case, was resumed.

The amounts of these checks, which were paid and returned to Washington, reach a total of about $200,000. One of them, drawn December 1, for $10,000, the day the McNamaras pleaded guilty, was cancelled by Morrison and stands as state evidence that Morrison had no knowledge in advance that the McNamaras were to change their pleas to guilty. The totals of the checks give a definite line on the amount of money placed in Clarence Darrow's hands during the McNamara trial.

Darrow's counsel, after a long examination of the checks and conference with the defendant, admitted the signatures on the backs as Darrow's and said the checks were drawn by Darrow, but they opposed the admissibility of the checks in evidence, contending that the defendant cannot be called upon to account for every single dollar of the money furnished him for the McNamara trial.

Counsel also hinted that the real purpose of the prosecution was to attempt to connect Eastern labor leaders with the alleged jury bribery. Prosecutor Ford said that no attempt would be made by the prosecution to show that President Samuel Gompers or Secretary Frank Morrison, of the American Federation of Labor, had any guilty knowledge of the alleged corruption of jurors and witnesses in the McNamara case.

DOCTORS WERE WRONG ABOUT WILSON CASE

Proved So by New Tonic in Less Than a Month

Among Bostonians who have been giving the new tonic, Tona Vita, a trial is C. H. Wilson, 10 Rollins St. He recently made the following statement for publication at a leading drug store:

"I had suffered for some time with nervousness and stomach trouble. I was advised by several physicians that I had gastritis and was treated by them for this trouble, but was not helped in the slightest. My food would not digest, but would ferment and cause acute indigestion and often severe palpitation of the heart. I could not sleep at night and would sometimes walk for hours in the hope that I would become sleepy. I tired very easily, had no energy, my mind was dull and sluggish and my memory very poor. I caught cold easily and had one severe cold after another.

"About a month ago I read about this new tonic that was being introduced in this country. I had little faith in any medicine, but was willing to try it in the hope of relief. The first few days I noticed quite an improvement. In fact, I began to improve after the first day. I could hardly believe it and thought it must be my imagination. I continued to improve every day from then on, and I am now as well as I have ever been in my life. I give the entire credit to Tona Vita. It and it alone restored my health."

People who are nervous and irritable, have imperfect digestion, little energy or ambition, feel melancholy and depressed, suffer with headaches, backaches, poor memory, sleeplessness, bad circulation, and who have pallid complexions and are susceptible to coughs and colds are unquestionably suffering with the modern complaint, nervous debility.

There are thousands of such half-sick men and women in Boston who really do not know just what is wrong with them. They struggle aimlessly along, for years at a time, without enjoying one day's good health.

Tona Vita will positively eliminate this condition. It is certain in its action and will rejuvenate the entire nervous system in comparatively short time. The tonic also acts on the mental condition of those afflicted with nervous debility. When buoyant spirits return and depression gives away to cheerfulness, it is hard to recognize some of the former sufferers.

MRS. F. A. CRANDELL, WHO SEEKS DIVORCE FROM HAWLEY HEIR

MRS FREDERICK A CRANDELL

SUES HUSBAND WITH MILLION

NEW YORK, June 6.—Adeline D. Crandell, who learned that her husband, Frederick H. Crandell, had fallen heir to about $1,000,000, while she was serving a twenty-day term on Blackwell's Island, is the plaintiff today in a suit for separation in the Supreme Court. She wants alimony commensurate with her husband's present wealth.

The court action is the last chapter in a romance that brought Crandell the lifelong enmity of his uncle, the late Edwin Hawley, multi-millionaire railroad financier, and forced the nephew to earn his own living. Early in 1898, Crandell aroused his uncle's wrath by marrying Miss Adeline McManus, a telegraph operator.

For fourteen years Crandell struggled along, his family growing larger. Then he suddenly became rich, through the death of his uncle. The lawyers of his estate found Crandell working as a bookkeeper for a firm of stevedores. Investigation showed that his wife was serving a sentence in the workhouse for disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Crandell alleges her husband never supported her, and cites several instances when her husband is said to have taken away her earnings to spend over the gaming table. On one occasion, she says, she found him with two young women, and when she remonstrated with him for his conduct he struck her to the ground. She explains that her workhouse sentence was due to the fact that her husband got some neighbors to complain against her. On April 14, she avers, he secretly took three of their children from a charitable institution and hid them away.

RAPS ENGLAND'S SAILOR BOAST

LONDON, June 6.—J. Bruce Ismay, managing director of the White Star line and Harold A. Sanderson, also a director, were the star witnesses at the Titanic wreck inquiry today. Ismay admitted when questioned about his escape from the sinking liner and those left behind replied that he "really was not thinking about that."

Director Sanderson made the remarkable statement on the stand that if the inquiry resulted in a decision to formulate regulations requiring all steamship companies to man their boats efficiently with able-bodied seamen "those seamen do not exist in this country."

Mr. Sanderson added the further information that "there would not be sufficient men qualified for the purpose."

He said that it would be impracticable for such a ship as the Titanic to carry boats to accommodate all persons. He thought that even in normal, fine weather they would be unseaworthy with sixty-two persons; forty would be as many as they could safely carry.

DUKE OF LEEDS HERE TO ENJOY FISHING TRIP

NEW YORK, June 6.—The Duke of Leeds has arrived from London to spend a few days in New York with his friend, Percy Chubb. The duke will go to Canada for a fishing trip. "I have no desire to get in the limelight while I am here," he said. "Even though it is my first visit, I have no impressions and I am not going to follow in the footsteps of the Duke of Sutherland and other titled Englishmen and buy land in Canada."

STRIKERS HAVE 5,000 BOMBS FOR SOLDIERS

BADAJOZ, Spain, June 6.—Striking street car workers in northern Spain are threatening to bring about civil war if the government complies with the request of electric tramway and steam railroad companies to furnish soldier guards. Leaders today informed the government they had 5,000 bombs ready to use if the government intervenes.

FOLLOW THE ARROWS

These Are Busy Days At This Live Store

THE rapid and steady growth of our business furnishes conclusive evidence that the public is quick to discover where it gets the most for its money—and to go there, even if it is "A Little Out of the Way."

It is not reasonable to suppose that this Live Store—situated as it is on a side street, just out of the big rent section—could possibly have built up such a tremendous business unless a large portion of the men of Boston were convinced of our greater value-giving, and stayed convinced after experience with our better clothes.

We probably hold the record for the biggest quick growth in the clothing history of New England. This record was made by giving a bigger dollar's worth—always. It's possible for us to do this because we are the largest spot-cash dealers in good clothes in New England and pay less rent than others in our line.

Kuppenheimer Clothes

Wherever you go, you'll find the best dressed men wearing these splendid, virgin wool garments. Kuppenheimer Clothes are now recognized throughout New England—as they long have been in every other section of the country—as the finest tailored clothes made. No small measure of this public recognition is due to the thorough satisfaction these garments have given the tens of thousands of patrons of the Six Great Kennedy Stores. We guarantee every Kuppenheimer garment to give a greater measure of lasting satisfaction than any other ready-to-wear clothes at any price.

RILEY'S COLUMN

WHEN Dave Shean, the Arlington lad, hit .309 in two games for the Boston Pilgrims playing shortstop at Pittsburg on the last Western trip, the Guns wondered why Dave was not signed up. It was a long time before the answer filtered its way into print, but here it is. It's worth hearing.

JOHN M. WARD has been in need of a shortstop since Al Bridwell went wrong, and when he had a chance to sign Shean, he wrote to Dave asking him what he would sign for. Dave wrote to Ward, giving him a figure which Ward refuses to make public, but which is suspected to be about $600 a month, meaning that Shean wanted to sign with Boston on a $7,000-a-year basis.

WARD wired to Shean, telling him that the figure was too high, and that it would cost him $1,000 to buy his release from Louisville besides. He asked Shean to name his "rock-bottom" price by wire. Ward received a telegram signed by Shean, saying that he would work for $50 less than the price first suggested—probably $450. Ward wired back to Shean telling him to join the club and he would be given a trial.

* * *

SHEAN joined the team, played two games, fielded very well in shortfield and batted .286. Then Ward offered him a contract, making the price the figure that Shean had named in his wire. Shean refused to sign, saying that he had telephoned the dispatch to a Western Union office and that the figure was wrong. He said that he was willing to sign, but he wanted the price he had given to the telephone operator.

* * *

HERE is Ward's story of what then happened: "I told Shean that I was willing to go back to that wire, and if the Western Union office would say that he had named the higher figure, we would give it to him. He was not willing to accept that proposition, so the contract was not changed and was unsigned. We needed a shortstop to fill in until Bridwell returns, and Shean did very well in those games, but we were not willing to accede to his demands under those circumstances. It was a makeshift proposition in any case. Shean's average had gradually dropped off until he batted .193 last year, and that was not very promising for a big league infielder."

ANOTHER incident in the transaction appears now in a story from the West concerning Outfielder Billy Jones. It seems that Jones was to be included in the transaction, and was to go to Louisville as part payment for Shean. Jones himself, received ten days' notice of the termination of his contract with the Pilgrims about that time, with the suggestion that a job had been found for him at Louisville and he could go there if he would accept the terms offered there. Somehow that deal fell through. Jones is still in Boston.

THIS is the Western version of part of the story—and it is given for what it is worth:

Peter Flaherty made one scouting expedition last Summer for the Boston Braves, and "Honey Bunch" is the word in Peoria, Ill., to see a player. In the game he watched an outfielder named William Jones whose home is in Moline, Ill., so well that Flaherty persuaded the late William Hepburn Russell to field Uncle Jones' daughter to Jones, whom Russell reserved from a Pittsburg Federal team. Jones was subsequently traded to Louisville, with $1,000, by Pittsburg. Shean, who would not report to Louisville and who says he has not been approached by Boston baseball executives, declines to pay the $1,000 to Louisville, and Louisville has not sent Tyler Ward Jones nor to report. It may be added that Flaherty also scouted Shean and made Portsmouth was just as much interested in Shean as Boston, Santa Clara stated.

IF—if there were no "ifs" in the Boston National games, by the way, Boston might win the pennant. Another "if" entered into the argument yesterday. The game rolled along until the ninth inning with Pittsburg in possession, 4 to 2. In that session, which was only the second, dropped the simplest sort of a foul pop-up from Carey's bat. Gowdy muffed it badly. Mike Donlin dropped a home run into the right field bleachers, scoring Wagner and Carey, and the rally was 7 to 2. McDonald's error counted, because Carey had tripped and scored in the eighth and Devlin doubled. McDonald walked and scored on Campbell's double in the ninth. It is easy to believe that "If" McDonald had gathered in that foul pop-up the score might have been 5 to 4 our way instead of 7 to 5 the other way.

* * *

MIKE DONLIN had a lot of fun yesterday. He played against the man for whom he was traded—Campbell—and the contest was one long argument with the bleachers. First Donlin popped to Devlin, his old Giant teammate, and then Devlin died to Donlin, Mike nearly breaking his back to get that one particular drive. The "bleachers" kidded Mike so much that he finally made a lusty drive right into their ranks, scattering them right and left, and waved his continual request to the bleachers as he trotted around the bases. That was in the eighth. Mike won his game for Pittsburg, and he had the laugh on the "bleachers" when he went out to field.

* * *

DONLIN and Campbell tested their skill against each other. Mike's home run was the only hit he made. He had four put-outs. Campbell had three put-outs and delivered a triple and a double with the same number of chances as Donlin had.

RED SOX GLOOMY OVER TIGER WIN

DETROIT, June 6.—There is gloom around the Cadillac Hotel, where the Red Sox are stopping, today. They hate to lose to the Tigers. And they are especially sore at dropping a game they thought they had sewed up.

The pitching staff, which looked rosy when the team left Boston last week doesn't look so rosy today and Manager Stahl for the first time this season is beginning to worry over his twirlers. Sox Line Hall, who left home with a clean record of victories, has lost two games for the scorers agree that yesterday's defeat must be charged up to him. There is a chance that Collins will be asked to go in the box this afternoon. He warmed up in good shape yesterday. Hitherto he has been quite effective against the Tigers. Though he has only pitched part of a game this year he is at last said to be "right."

Yesterday's game was a hard one to lose. The disaster came in the opening half and been going along in great style, bowling the Tigers over in fast order as they stepped to the plate. Then came the explosion. Here is how it happened.

Hall lost control and filled the sacks. Manager Stahl then decided to shift pitchers.

So Jean Wood was sent for. Jean found himself in a spot that would have pinned him immensely, with the three bases filled and all the good hitters coming up. Jean followed the example of the two who had preceded him and looked over a few of the ones, forcing Stanage in with the tieing run.

With the sacks still carrying their occupants, and Cobb at the bat, the outlook for more runs was bright. Cobb nearly knocked Wood down with a liner that nearly brought up out in centre field. Wood and Bush both scoring, and Jones taking third. Crawford bounded a hot one off Wood's right leg, but Wagner picked the ball up quickly and got Cobb at first in time to nail Sam.

Jones scored on this play, and Tyrus tried to make third, but was doubled when Wagner got the ball to Stahl in time to nail Sam.

Jones scored on this play, and Tyrus tried to make third, but was doubled when Wagner got the ball to Stahl in time to nail Sam, and Larry touched the runner as he slid.

Pilgrims Toss Game to the Pittsburgs

The Pilgrims dropped one notch lower in the cellar championship yesterday, for while they were performing their usual stunt of losing, the Brooklyn Dodgers, stole a march by capturing a game from the Cubs.

The Pirates were the recipients of the Pilgrim's generosity in yesterday's contest. Fred Clarke's band was not the least bit backward about coming forward with Devlin's hospitality. And it was Mike Donlin who was the principal beneficiary, going over to Messrs. Ward, King et als.

In the eighth inning, Carey singled and doubled, Carey dribbled to the platter, Devlin got it. He sent up a nice easy foul over third base which Gowdy got under it, and it looked good for the third out. But Mike Donlin's fingers crossed and it slipped away from him. Then came Donlin's chance and he took full advantage of it, when he went to the Stadium, by sending the ball to the right field bleachers for a home run.

MRS. MORSE'S DOGS TAKE BLUE RIBBONS

Mrs. Morse won with Old English sheepdogs in both champion classes. A fine pair of dogs she has, and entered the ring than those which won—Shepton Hero, which won from Rockcliffe Hats Off, a bulldog, and the female Champion Slumber, from Vickery Bulldog Water.

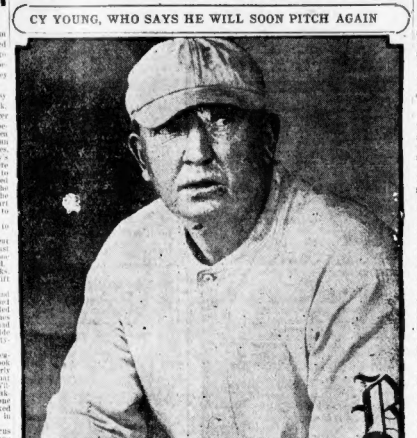
Cy Young Is "Coming Back" Veteran Sees "Bonesetter"

CY YOUNG, WHO SAYS HE WILL SOON PITCH AGAIN



SPECIALIST TELLS PLAYER TO REST A WEEK AND THEN START PITCHING.

PAOLI, Ohio, June 6.—It's a long ways from nowhere is this Paoli, Tuscarawas County, Ohio, but when one arrives at the end of his journey he finds Denton T. Young, baseball patriarch. He sits on the porch with his red Irish setter "Larry" close beside him. Young has just returned from a visit to "Bonesetter" Reese at Youngstown, Ohio.

"I'm not done yet," Cy volunteered. "Far from it. In fact, I will be as good as I ever was in a short time."

"When I quit the Boston Club in Pittsburg, it was because I was not in shape to pitch. I am far from being through, however. Why, I know that I am better than three-fourths of the pitchers who draw pay envelopes from major league clubs every two weeks.

"I told Manager Kling that I wanted to consult Bonesetter Reese at Youngstown, because I felt a pain in my shoulder for the first time since I have been pitching. I twisted in a couple of farmer games in Pennsylvania and New York before I consulted the 'bonesetter.'

"Dr. Reese has given me a thorough examination. I had been troubled with a pain in my elbow from working too hard in an exhibition game on the Spring training trip. That didn't trouble much. The bonesetter told me that owing to the pain in the elbow I had put too much strain on my shoulder so as not to hurt the elbow. He pushed a couple of muscles or ligaments back in place. Then he said:

"'Cy, your arm is soft and pliable and there is no deep seated trouble with it. Altogether it looks like the best baseball arm I have ever examined. I think you ought to be good for several years of strenuous work yet.'

No one could blame Cy for showing his pride and satisfaction as he vouchsafed the foregoing information.

Continuing he said: "I am following the bonesetter's instructions to the letter. He told me to lie around and not touch a baseball for seven days. After that time expires I am going to get some country kid who can catch me and see if I have control and the other things. Later on, I intend to get up a couple of country games and pitch them, too. Then, if I am right, I'll report to Manager Kling, and help the Wardmen climb the National League ladder.

"I won four and lost five games and died one for Boston last season and they had a poorer club then than this year. With the present bunch of hustlers behind me I feel certain that I can win 20 per cent. of my games."

Playing Managers Take it Easy Days Off Frequent With Leaders

Why is it that so many players managers find it so convenient or necessary to lay off so much longer and oftener after they are appointed managers, than when they were in the rank and file and had some one else to dictate to them whether they should be in the line-up or not?

There have been so many instances when it has appeared as if player-managers had taken advantage of their position and authority to lay off at times when it did not seem to be by reason of absolute necessity that owners of clubs have come to the stage where they ask questions that might be embarrassing to certain players who have been raised to managerial positions while in active field service and they are able and capable to continue.

We do not make any invidious comparisons, but it seems to have been an almost invariable custom that when players have been lifted to the more exalted position of leaders, that off days have been with them much more frequent than before their advancement.

There have been cases, of course, such as those of Stahl, Chance and Doolin, where accidents have prevented those conscientious, loyal and ambitious players and managers from being regularly and constantly on active duty, but there are many others, who have put themselves in the position to warrant the impression that the baseball easy life was more in their minds than a strict appreciation of what they owed to their employers, as well as to the baseball public.

Minor injuries and ailments have been exaggerated more than they surely would have been if some certain player-managers were not the sole judges of their own physical condition.

When a club owner promotes a player to manager, the player shows certain mental characteristics of leadership as well as superior ability as a player, or he would never be in place a player over the heads of his fellows who was not superior in playing ability. If that were done good-bye to the authority. Professional ball players were never known to accept with good grace the advice of any manager whom they knew had less knowledge of the game or ability to play it than they. It is a manager's personality, too, a certain in-born characteristic as a leader of men that all successful managers have been and are blessed and fortified with that enables them to hold their players to their work as a frictionless team. And without that system of unity, no goes the whole shooting match.

It is therefore an absolute necessity for the manager to be on the job and in the place where his best services can be rendered. If on the field as an active player, then in the line-up as often as possible—if on the bench and coaching lines, right there, otherwise his players will have lapses that will put them out of the running.

Something unique in the history of league baseball in this section of the country, will be staged on the afternoon of June 17th by the Greater Boston League when a triple-header will be played at the Malden High School grounds. The entire six teams will be seen in action at the holiday matinee, although the games will be cut to seven innings each in order to get them through in fast time.

The triple-header has been arranged because the regular grounds in other league cities than Malden are to be used by the local High School teams and the new league had no wish to interfere with the youngsters.

It is expected that the hundred ball players out in uniform on one ground will attract a lot of fans who have not as yet had a chance to look over the new leaguers. The opposing teams will be South Boston and Everett-Chelsea, Lynn and Malden, Medford and Somerville, Somerville. Three umpires will work in each game.

Frank O'Toole, the younger brother of the famous pitcher O'Tooles, will make his professional debut this afternoon at the Locust street grounds, pitching for Dorchester of the Greater Boston League against South Boston.

Heinie Zimmerman of the Cubs by strict Archie Marshall, manager of the Everett-Chelsea Greater Boston League team, urging him to try out Zim's younger brother. He will probably be given a chance to show what he can do.

Cliff Blankenship, a Columbus, Ga., baseball product and once a big leaguer, is managing the Missoula team in the Union Association.

HORINE BEATS RECORD JUMP

NEW YORK, June 6—George Horine, the great high jumper of Stanford University, in practice at Travers Island yesterday cleared the bar at 6 ft. 8¼ in., higher than the world's record he broke up recently in California.

Many athletes saw the trial. C. C. Childs, former Yale weight thrower, and Simon Gillies acted as judges.

The bar was first put at 5 ft. 10 in., so easily did the Californian clear this height that it was next raised to 6 ft. 2 in. Again he cleared it, only three inches more were added. In his first leap at this height Horine grazed the bar and knocked it off. But in his second trial he cleared it by several inches.

Then the cross piece was raised to 6 ft. 9 in. The champion went over it the first time in clever style. Satisfied with the feat, the Californian called it enough and quit the field.

Childs and Gillies got a steel tape and measured the height. They found that the bar sagged three-quarters of an inch and that Horine had cleared the height of 6 ft. 8¼ in.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I WISH I could find a thing in the Sunday paper that my mother and I could read at the same time in a single spot. It was a artikel that me and Ma read last night about seventy. The main point was the artikel said Pa, and that no man got to be the greatest athlete or the greatest poet or the greatest statesman until he was about fifty. There is some truth in this man that we just read about. Until I read it I never knew how near I was as a athlete A, not think I will soon be fifty.

Then Ma would look at me & started in for to [illegible] Ma, if I remember right you was out of touch of a athlete when you was only fifteen the year we got married. Why, say, Pa, you are getting and I [illegible] old age. Dont you remember all it a splend'd athlete I was during them golden days of our courtship. Why, I Pa, the first thing about me that attracted pure attention was the [illegible] and you I made to that Thanksgiving day football game, the time that I played the colors of Michigan U, and I [illegible] never forgit that bite after it's gone, said Pa. That was the bite you accepted me when I proposed to you. Nobody knows I shall never forgit that. I guess we made said Pa. Shall you never forgit it?

Can Never Forget

I have often tried to forgit it said Ma, but it come up all the time to haunt me like a gray goast. In my waking hours & seven in my dreems I am all the time recalling the time that I was foolish enuff to say sure when you kneeled down & said them fateful words which took me away from a cum furtable hoam.

I dident think it was such a swell hoam, said Pa. There was three enlarged pictures on the parlor wall.

I know that, said Ma, but there was also three square meels on the dining room tabel. That in itself was a good deal for a yung trusting gurl to give up. But go on & tell me about these fifty yeer old athletes. What bug idee have you got in yure hed now?

I will tell you the idee that I have in my hed, said Pa, & I hope that you will be so good as not to laff at me. I am going to represent America in the next Olympic games. I have made up my mind. Me & Billy McGlaughlin was talking it all over down at Tim O'Brien's lase nite, & after Billy had felt of my biceps, he was almost sure that I wud have a swell chanse in the shot putting & hammer throwing events, & he was also sure that I wud develop into a grate long distance runner.

Husband, said Ma, I dount like to say anything to hort yure feelings or the feelings of yure friend Billy Ma something, but I think that you must be two plain, every day allies, Ma sed. What did you ever do to make yure arms so strong, except twisting a mop by the wet front door.

I used to swing Indian clubs, said Pa. I taught a class at my school back in Wisconsin.

Put to the Test

I have heard you say that a thousand times, said Ma. Bobbie, sed Ma, now I am going to put yure father to a test. Run over to the library & git that pair of Indian clubs that I bought for yure father this afternoon.

I went & brought the Indian clubs, & Pa got kind of red in the fare the minit he seen them, & then I knew that he had never swung no clubs. Sure enuff, the first time he tried to swing them over his hed they cracked together in the middle & both of the clubs hit Pa on the hed.

Wen Pa woke up he sed Did I win the Olympic championship?

No, sed Ma, yes, Martin Sheridan, you did. Now Ma all the time calls Pa Martin Sheridan.

Married Life the Third Year

No. 46—Warren Wants Helen to Give the Griffens an Exceptional Dinner

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

"WELL, I've asked Griffen to dine with us Thursday."

"Thursday! Oh, Warren!"

"What's the matter with Thursday?"

"Why, dear, you said you'd give me plenty of time—and today's Tuesday.

"Well, you've got two days. How much more do you want? We've got to have them some time. Might as well be Thursday."

"Not I hoped if you took them out we'd—but I have them here."

"Of course we must have them here. I told you Griffen would appreciate that more than anything we could do. He's got a company pretty well organized now, and I believe he's going to let me in on the ground floor. Now I want you to have a bang-up dinner. Never mind the cost. If you and Delia can't do it get a woman to help."

"But, dear, do you think we can get up a really big dinner here?"

"Don't have to have a big dinner. Nobody wants a lot of things. Just a few special dishes and have them mighty good. We want to give them something they won't get out West. Here"—taking some letters from his pocket and making notes on the back of an envelope—"we'll make out the menu right now. Fresh caviar to start with—how does that strike you?"

Helen who had never eaten or even seen fresh caviar, could only murmur a vague assent.

"Is there only a few places you can get the fresh caviar, Theo?" he asked the waiter.

"Yes, sir. We only get it canned out West."

Hard Figuring

He wrote it down on the envelope.

"What next? Clams, I suppose. Have them in a row with caviar. Soup? No, it's warm—we'll cut out the soup. Now, then, how's fish?"

"I suggested Helen uncertainly.

"I hate it—shad roe! Can't get it in West either. Shad roe and bacon is the been crisp. Now let's see, what have we been feeding from the West? Caviar, clams, shad roe—we have an entree. Now—"

"Chicken a la Maryland," suggested Helen timidly.

"I hate it—too rich for the roast did you talked over and rejected [illegible] own roast rack of Spring lamb, potatoes browned on the [illegible] a most attractive dish [illegible] course demanded new peas [illegible] vegetables," as he wrote it down. "Now for the salad—"

"Lettuce and endive, which was my favorite salad," Warren thought with a sigh, would be more satisfactory, but both were finally rejected in favor of the artichoke—artichoke vinaigrette.

He doesn't presented a most difficult problem. She constantly loses Warren for a moment by suggesting more original [illegible] "What something more original [illegible] it all out."

Helen got the cook book and suggested serving fancy paddines and pastries, but Warren turned them all aside.

"I've got it! Zabaioni!"

"Zabaioni!" Helen repeated blankly.

"That stuff Stevens ordered at that Italian restaurant."

"Oh, that was delicious! But, dear I wouldn't know how to make that."

"Don't want you to make it. Get it there. Have them send it up just in time for dinner. I'll attend to that. Now what kind of cheese—or do we want cheese."

A Rich Dessert

"Isn't that dessert very rich?" asked Helen. "Would we want cheese with that?"

"That's so. Zabaioni is pretty rich. All right, we'll cut the cheese. Just coffee and a cordial."

And the wine. Warren? You'll see to that?"

"I'll look after the wine. I'll have a bottle of cocktails mixed at the club. Can't mix them right here, and the bottled kind aren't fit to drink. Griffen drinks Scotch. Don't think he cares for wine. I'll get some good Scotch, and some sauterne for you and Mrs. Griffen. Most people like Sauterne. I'll drink Scotch with him."

Here Warren rose, threw the escape down on the table, yawned and stretched. "That's settled. I'll stop by the club this afternoon and order the wine. You'd better phone about the fresh caviar this morning. They don't keep it long if that on hand. Better order it in any [illegible]."

When Warren had gone, Helen adopted the menu from the back of the envelope on to a large sheet of writing paper and ruled each dish to one of the ingredien.

Zabaioni

Then, being a very methodical little person, she made out a separate list of the flowers and market articles. And still another list of the things she would have to do before the dinner, such as clean silver, wash doilies, go over table linen, polish furniture, polish floor, repair fern, etc.

Before the preparation for a dinner [illegible] this meant not only the dinner itself, but a general house cleaning as well. Her home was always immaculate, but a dinner party [illegible] meant an extra special cleaning. And usually she worked as hard before the dinner that she was too worn out to enjoy it.

Warren's Philosophy

"Give them something to eat," was Warren's policy. "Feed them and entertain them, and they won't care a hang about anything else. You wear yourself out doing all sorts of fool things, and then you're too tired to talk to anybody when they do come."

But he preached this in vain for always before they had company Helen worked herself almost ill.

However, they had never had any one to dinner of such importance as the Griffens. It was through Mr. Griffen's influence that Warren's Western deal had gone [illegible]. Now he had come on [illegible] form motter company and Warren was on a way to a [illegible] chance of being in on the ground floor."

So Helen felt that much depended upon this dinner. She knew that Warren felt that, too, for he had never before taken the trouble to make out a menu or to show any such interest.

He had asked her to call up about the caviar this morning, so now she got down the telephone book and looked up the number. She knew that ——'s was a large and most exclusive delicatessen, although she had been there only a few times.

In this —n't" when she got the number. "I want to see about getting some fresh caviar for Thursday."

How much will you want?" It was a man's voice, gruff and foreign. Helen hesitated. "How does it come?"

"By the ounce or pound."

"Oh, then, about a pound. How much is that?"

"Twelve dollars a pound."

"Twelve dollars!" Helen's voice expressed her astonishment.

"Yes, madam, fresh caviar is twelve dollars a pound. Did you want the canned?"

"We can save you the cans from twenty-eight cents up."

"Oh, no, no—I want the fresh, but I don't know just how much. I'll call you up about it later."

A Shock

Twelve dollars a pound for fresh caviar! Surely there must be some mistake. Warren would never have ordered anything so expensive.

Hurriedly she called up at the office and told him the price.

"That's all right. You don't expect to get fresh caviar cheap, do you? But you won't need more than a quarter of a pound. Tell him to reserve that and I'll come by Thursday and get it myself."

This incident still further increased Helen's feeling that much depended upon this dinner. Warren always believed in having good things to eat, but he never believed in putting on "frills," as he called it. And that he should be willing to go to so much trouble and pay so much for a mere relish to be served before the claims proved the importance of the dinner.

And now, more than ever, Helen anguished over the possibility of anything going wrong. All day she worked with fierce energy. She had sent for Mrs. Mooney, the Irish woman who often helped her, but could not wait until she came, so began herself to [illegible] cleaning.

It never occurred to her that the state of her nerves was of far more importance to the success of the dinner than the washing of all the woodwork and the oiling of all the floors. For probably no one would notice either the woodwork or the floors, but they would notice the tired lines in her face, and would certainly feel her tense nervous strain, which overwork always brought.

So Helen prepared for this dinner with a reckless expenditure of much energy and strength—but with very little wisdom.

Do You Know That—

Mr. Frank Lloyd, at the annual dinner [illegible] of the British Wood Pulp Association, spoke of the serious effect upon the industry of the drought in Scandinavia, and, referring to the rapid development of the industry, pointed out how dependent paper makers now were upon wood pulp. They had to rely on straw, etc., as was the case only about twenty-five years ago. His mill at Sittingbourne "would alone require a string of carts over four miles long, and at least 40,000,000 gallons of water every twenty four hours."

The ecclesiastical authorities at Forst, near the Silesian frontier, have taken action against women who persist in wearing large hats in church. They complain that they are a source of inconvenience during communion, as the priest has to stoop too much. The women have been invited to wear hats with narrow brims when they come to church.

A physiological curiosity in the form of a human aquarium has been discovered by Dr. Farez. The subject is capable of drinking from six to seven litres of water [illegible], in, practically between 10½ and 12½ pints. The Mushroom Hero

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"SWEET" writes me the following letter:

"I love a man to whom I have never been introduced, and I want him to love me. I am twenty years of age, and he is twenty-eight. I have written for his photo, which he has sent, and, being an actor, thought it was wanted to settle a dispute which I started in my letter to him. He has various admirers, but I love him, and SOMETHING MUST BE DONE!"

My dear girl, something will be done, and it will be overwhelming and crushing when it is done, if you permit yourself to fall ice in a mushroom love like this.

The "something" that will be done is what happens when a road crusher rolls over an obstacle in its path. You are deliberately throwing yourself in the path of a road crusher that will crush out all your life—your hope, your faith, your future, when you indulge in love for a man whom you do not know, and one whose calling depends in a measure for popular success in making matinee worshippers of girls as silly as you.

I do not use that word "silly" to give offence, but because it is a true description of you, and one you should recognize, and change, before it is too late.

You are silly to give this man a second thought and silly to a dangerous degree in writing to him and asking him for his photograph.

I admonstrate the lines he speaks on the stage are heroic, and he does some noble deed, and you, poor child, imagine that his life off the stage is a counterpart.

You have confused the hero who gets paid so much a week for being a hero with the man who is a hero when there is no extra [illegible] and none so upward.

You gaze on that noble make up countenance and [illegible] little mewling fist the first [illegible] wears before an audience is born, the ugly squalling of man he wears to [illegible] who know him best.

You have emptied out your poor little heart at his feet, and if acquaintance with him resulted in it getting bruised he would care no more than if it were a football.

He need not be too greatly condemned for this. It is the class of women to which I belong that you will not belong that makes him what he is.

Notes of admiration and adulation by the [illegible] photograph, [illegible] are encouraged to appear before their appeal [illegible] stage, receipts all serve to turn a head that was never well balanced on its first [illegible].

And the hero on the stage becomes the victim of real life, and it is the women who are to blame.

Something must be done, you say. My dear, girl, let this be the "something" and see to it that it is done and done promptly.

Tear thoughts of this man out of your mind. Wrap up his photograph and if you [illegible] to keep it, put it among things that are safe and keep your head don't go near his stage.

There are [illegible] in your own circle of friends worthy [illegible] of men [illegible] that who are friends of your brother, men of whom your father approves. If you must have a hero on whom to put your affections on an [illegible] worthy of them don't waste your love on a creature that you are ready to [illegible] at the first of a man who [illegible] you. You don't want to make a [illegible] of the most sacred of all emotions, yet you do make it so when this man is laughed at [illegible] many times.

Without doubt he has boasted of his many conquests and [illegible] he prides [illegible] showing notes from women to [illegible] answer and [illegible] in a store window [illegible] showing records of a big day's sales.

They make him popular [illegible] by his stock in trade. They enhance his value to the [illegible] manager, and mean increased attendance and if anything he does [illegible] the attendance there is increased salary for him.

So far as sentiment is concerned, he doesn't [illegible] that many [illegible] admirers" [illegible] speak of than for so many pegs in the wall.

Don't cheapen yourself by becoming one of them. Remember that every one puts her own price tag on herself, and that it is your fault, and your fault alone, if yours is low.

Just remember all the time, my dear and keep the thought close to you, that some day the right man will come along.

And when he comes it will not add to his respect for you, or to your happiness, to learn that you have been hanging around stage doors with your heart on your sleeve.

A Mysterious Disappearance — One of the Greatest Detective Stories Ever Written — By Gordon Holmes

BEGIN TODAY BY READING THIS FIRST.

LADY ALICE DYKE, wife of Sir Charles Dyke, disappears from her London home. She is traced to Richmond by Claude Bruce, a barrister, and friend of Sir Charles. The body of a murdered woman is found jammed in a drain pipe at Putney. Inspector White, of Scotland Yard, finds that some of the underclothing on the body belonged to Lady Dyke. The body, however, is not identified. Soon after, Jane Harding, Lady Dyke's maid, also disappears. Bruce searches Richmond for a clue and centres his attention on Raleigh Mansions, a fashionable apartment house. He ventures to call on Mrs. Gwendolen Hillmer, one of the tenants, who, he learns, is acquainted with Sydney H. Corbett, a former tenant and who disappeared at the time of the mystery. Mrs. Hillmer admits that Corbett is her brother, and because of an unfortunate business deal with Dodge & Co., brokers, was forced to go to the south of France. She refuses to tell Corbett's real name. She and Bruce go to the theatre. He recognizes one of the chorus girls as the missing maid. After the play Bruce manages to meet the girl. He endeavors to question her, but she is defiant. Bruce then visits Mr. Dodge of Dodge & Co. Dodge declares he has never heard of Corbett, Mrs. Hillmer's missing brother.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

"THAT will do. You may go. You see you have come to the wrong shop, Mr. Bruce."

"Yes, so I see."

The barrister kept looking at the back of Mr. Dodge's head, but made no move.

Mr. Dodge became puzzled.

"Now, Mr. Bruce," he cried, "you know the age of my son, and the extent of my information about Mr. Corbett. Is there anything else in which I may be of service?"

"Yes. You do a great deal of underwriting, mostly for the flotation of gold mining properties?"

"Y—yes. That is a branch of our business."

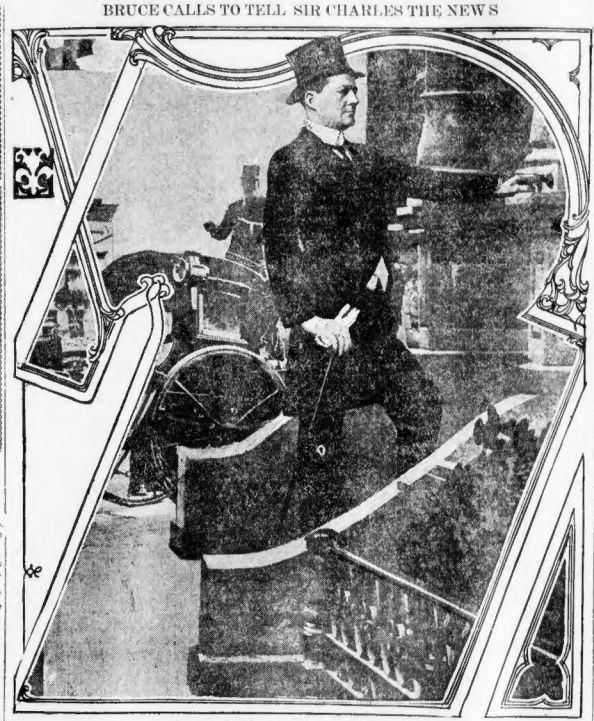
He Had Dealings Here

"I am interested in this class of undertaking, and I was given to understand that Mr. Corbett has had some dealings with you in a similar respect for a considerable sum of money."

"The name is absolutely unknown to me."

"Of course. So I gather. I am sorry to hear it. Several clients of mine have money to invest in that way, and I naturally came to a firm whose name apparently figured largely in the transactions of Mr. Corbett."

BRUCE CALLS TO TELL SIR CHARLES THE NEWS



A hansom brought him quickly to Portman square.

(Posed by William P. Carleton of "The Wall Street Girl" Company.)

It was good to see the manner in which Mr. Dodge metaphorically kicked himself for his previous attitude. His emotion was painful. For quite an appreciable time he could not trust his sentiments to words.

At last he struggled to express himself. "Really Mr. Bruce, if you had only put things differently. Don't you see, it rather upset me when you came in and began jawing about the youngsters. And then you spring Mr. Corbett's name on me—a man of whom I have no sort of knowledge. It must have been my firm of which your friends heard. There is absolutely no other Dodge in Leadenhall street. Indeed, we are the only financial Dodges—that is—er—Messrs. Dodge, Son & Co., Limited, are the only firm of the name dealing with financial matters—in the city.

By this time Bruce had assured himself that Mr. Dodge did not know Mr. Corbett's identity, and if Mrs. Hillmer's brother had changed his name to conceal himself from Dodge, it was likely to be successful.

"Anyhow, I am here, Mr. Dodge," he said cheerfully, "so I may as well enter into negotiations with you. Have you any good things in hand at this moment?"

"None of the best. We are just waiting for the market to ease a bit, and we shall have at least five splendid properties to place before the public. By the way, do you smoke?"

Produces Cigars

Bruce did smoke; and Mr. Dodge produced a box of excellent cigars. Then he warmed to his work.

"Here is the prospectus of the Golden Halo Mine, capital £150,000, for which the vendors are asking £140,000 in cash, with a working capital of £10,000. The ore saw in sight is estimated to produce two millions sterling, and the mine is not one-tenth developed. We are offering underwriters ten per cent. in cash, and there is not the slightest risk, as the shares will stand at a high premium within a few days after listing."

"It sounds very promising," said Bruce, "but my principals are more interested in taking up concerns which have been already established; but in which, for want of sufficient capital, the vendors' shares have, by a process of reconstruction, come into the market. If you have anything of that kind"

"The very thing," interrupted Dodge excitedly. "The Springbok Mine will just suit you. After all is said and done, Golden Halos are a bit in the air, between you and me. But the Springbok is a genuine article. It was capitalised for a quarter of a million, and the directors went to allotment on a subscription this of about £14,000. This money has been expended, but twice the amount is necessary to develop the property properly. A call was made on the shares, but no one paid up, and there is a talk of compulsory reconstruction. Believe me, money put into it now will yield two hundred per cent. within twelve months."

"There is a whiff of scent on this trail," said Claude to himself. He added aloud: "That looks promising. Can you give me details?"

Here Is the Prospectus

"By all means. Here is the original prospectus." Bruce glanced through the document, which dealt with the Springbok claims on the Rand, with more candor than is usually exhibited in such compilations. Judging from the reports of several mining engineers of repute, it really looked as if, this time, Mr. Dodge were speaking with some degree of accuracy.

"This reads well," said Bruce. "What proportion of share capital is falling in on the reconstruction scheme?"

"I hold 50,000 shares myself," cried Dodge, "and though my money is locked up just now, I am so convinced about this mine that I will manage to pay the call myself. Roughly speaking, there are 150,000 shares to be underwritten at, say, three shillings each."

And who are the present holders?"

The barrister asked the question in the most unconcerned way imaginable, yet by the answer depended the whole success or otherwise of this hitherto unpredicted mission.

Mr Dodge was manifestly anxious.

"I take it that we are talking with a definite view to business?" he said.

The barrister hesitated. Even in the detection of a crime a man does not care to tell a deliberate lie, and Dodge's attitude so far had been candid enough. The Springbok Mine honestly looked to be a good speculative investment, so he resolved to place the proposition before one or two friends who dealt with similar matters, and who were fully able to look after their own interests.

"Yes," he answered, "I am here for that purpose. If my principals take this thing they will go in for it."

The Vendors' List

"Then here is the vendors' list," said Mr. Dodge, taking a foolscap sheet from a drawer.

Claude perused it nonchalantly. His

How English Beauties Keep Faces Youthful

Christian Miller, F. C. I., noted English health expert, attributes the early aging of American women mainly to the "artificial nervousness," the "constant hurry" and the "tension on each on the inestimable charm of repose."

Another valuable lesson to be learned from the English woman is that she does not go in for much for cosmetics, the continual use of which must ruin any complexion. The beauty doctors from King George's realm have the highest opinion of a more wholesome method of treating the face, namely, cold cream, Ordinarily recommended as a cold cream, eliminates the worst complexion. American women may easily acquire the habit, this was being obtainable at drugstores generally in the United States. It is applied at night and washed off in the morning. One ounce is sufficient to completely remove a bad complexion. Full directions for applying this cream, which is from the purchase of cold and defaulting cold cream which are constantly appearing.—Woman's Herald.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

Copper Metal Quoted 1/8 Higher; Shares in Demand

By W. H. ROSS.

STATE STREET, June 6—Midday.—Continued strength was the feature of the Boston market today, it opening firm and becoming very active, with copper issues on the rise. Among the stocks which advanced more than a point before noon were Calumet & Arizona, up 1¾; Wolverine and Allouez, each 2 points higher; Ahmeek, up 5; Osceola, up 1½; Quincy, a point higher, and Amalgamated, up 1⅜.

The price of electrolytic copper was advanced early today to 13⅞ cents a pound.

The New York market had this strength, and around the end of the first hour there was another sharp advance which affected several leaders.

The demand for copper stocks in Boston during the morning was greater than has been known for a long time and the market had increased in firmness after that.

Coppers Higher in New York.

The advance in the price of the red metal in London had a stimulating effect upon copper issues in the New York market, and they were the most prominent and active stocks at the opening. Several advanced materially compared with yesterday's closing prices. Amalgamated opened at 86½, a gain of ⅞, and then advanced to 86¾. American Smelting was up 5/8 Chino rose ⅝ to 34, establishing a new high record; Utah and Anaconda made fractional gains. Butte Superior continued to climb on the Curb, touching a new high mark in the opening price. This issue was quoted at 24⅜ bid and 24¾ asked at the outset, a gain of two points.

Coal stocks reflected accumulation. Reading gained ⅝ and Lehigh Valley advanced ⅜. N. Y. Air Brake, which rose 6 points on Wednesday, made a further gain of 4⅝, selling at 75½.

The undertone was strong and at the end of half an hour's trading the day's strength was still unaltered. Steel common rose ⅜. Canadian Pacific was under pressure, as a result of foreign selling, losing 2.

The Curb was strong.

American railroads in London was firm. Canadian Pacific in London was heavy from selling by Liverpool interests.

In the London copper market, spot opened at £79, an advance of £1 2s. bid while futures at £79 10s. also sold £1 2s. bid.

Twenty-Cent Copper Predicted.

It is stated in New York that consumers can get no July copper in the market now at any price and that some of the big users are in quite a predicament as regards fulfilling immediate plant requirements. There is active buying going on according to reports from authoritative quarters and big orders have been booked within a few days of the copper exchange. No decline in the foreign demand is reported. The metal quoted here is from 1 to 2 cents higher in London than today, and cables report that "the market was firmer and more active, with higher prices, rather than a decrease in the exportation of copper from the country."

Copper is now the subject of a prominent article on saying: "I believe that 20-cent copper is as good and more entirely based on a sounder demand. I look to see a reduction in United States stocks from 200,000 tons to 150,000 tons pounds, and possibly more. Some surprising figures are given out regarding the world's consumption of copper, which, it is said, have not responded more to the present rise in the price of the metal than to the former drop. The answer is, it is claimed, that the consumption is the spontaneousness of a movement in which all nations are participating in the world. When the public realizes that copper share earnings are going to be large, it will want to buy and will fix such stock market quotations with reasonable promptness. The public has not done this here as yet done."

The price of fine copper among companies has been increased. The price of Lake copper has been increased. The same have declared dividends on the same and will be in the market.

In this connection Thompson, Towle & Co. in a circular letter say: "What more natural than for copper companies to now making—which in general are greatly increasing their earnings—to begin the raising of dividend rates should continue the present favorable conditions.

The Railroad Bill Just Passed by the Senate Establishes a Bad Precedent and Is Against the Wise Policy of the People of Massachusetts

The railroad bill, just passed by the Senate, providing for a tunnel between the North and South Stations, contains a very bad method of establishing the terms upon which the railroads may take possession of the tunnel.

The bill leaves a settlement of this most important question to the Joint Board, comprised by the Railroad Commissioners and the Rapid Transit Commissioners, and subject to the approval of the Mayor and the City Council of Boston.

This is entirely contrary to precedent and is establishing a new and bad precedent, which will work much more harm than any delay in the construction of a tunnel can possibly work.

All our tunnel legislation has carried with it a provision fixing the length of the periods during which the public shall temporarily surrender possession of their great underground highways.

In these modern days the people have awakened to the tremendous importance of retaining control of their highways, and after a long and bitter struggle they have established a policy which has withstood all assaults, and that policy is to limit the tenure of these tunnels to a fixed, short term.

It is little protection to the public to let the joint Board of Railroad Commissioners and Rapid Transit Commissioners settle this question. The personnel of that majority of these two Boards, which turned a somersault last year on the question of consolidation of the West End and the Boston Elevated, has not changed.

That malodorous surrender and flop of a majority of the Joint Board within one year is too recent to have been forgotten by the public. The gentlemen who can in a single twelve months declare that seven per cent is a great sufficiency as dividends upon the common stock of the West End Street Railway and rebuke the West End for demanding more, and then a year later declare that they ought to be given more because only by giving them what did not belong to them at an expense of three million dollars to the public could the consolidation be obtained, are not gentlemen who can safely be trusted in the public interest.

They did all they could to help a lot of greedy stockholders plunder the public of three million dollars, and it required the Governor and the Legislature to prevent the extortion.

Nor is the reference to the Mayor and City Council of Boston much protection. Experience has shown us that safety lies in large numbers. The Massachusetts House of Representatives is the safest public body in this Commonwealth today. It is hard to control a majority of its two hundred and forty members. The Senate with forty is easily controlled, and a City Council of nine members would be still more easily controlled. We want no tunnel upon any such terms.

NEW EVIDENCE Saved Mrs. Cusumano From the Death Chair

It Might Be That MORE NEW EVIDENCE Would Show That Life Imprisonment Is a Grave Injustice—Why Not Look Into This FURTHER?

The Governor and the Executive Council of Massachusetts refused to allow Mrs. Lena Cusumano, convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to death in Plymouth County, to be electrocuted. Her sentence of death was commuted by a unanimous vote of the nine members of the Council to life imprisonment. Today Mrs. Cusumano is an inmate of the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn.

In the AMERICAN of May 23 was printed an editorial in which the Governor and Council were urged to save the life of Mrs. Cusumano. This newspaper felt that MEN would be taking a step backward if, after a period of 134 years within which no woman had been executed in this State, this WOMAN and MOTHER was sent to the death chair.

But it seems that the life of Mrs. Cusumano was not saved because she is a woman and mother, but because NEW AND IMPORTANT EVIDENCE was discovered that raised a grave doubt as to the GUILT of Mrs. Cusumano.

Neither this nor any other State can afford to send to death a man or woman when there exists a SHADOW OF DOUBT as to the guilt of the accused person.

The new evidence that caused the Council to unanimously nullify the verdict of the Plymouth County jury was not given to the public. It was communicated to the Council in executive session. Governor Foss said he knew what the evidence was and he felt that when it came before the Council the life of the woman would be saved.

If there is such a grave question as to the guilt of the woman—so serious a question as to cause the entire Council to vote against taking her life—is it not possible that a GREAT INJUSTICE is being done to this woman by sending her to prison for life?

Mrs. Cusumano declared in a sworn statement which was presented to the Council that she did not participate in the murder of her husband; that she knew nothing about the crime until Enrico Mascioli, a boarder in her home, told her he had committed it and that she kept silent because she feared he would carry out his threat and kill her if she told the facts.

Mrs. Cusumano is the mother of three children. If her story is true, that she had nothing to do with the crime itself and kept her lips sealed about it afterwards through fear, she should not be forced to spend the rest of her days in prison.

Why would it not be well to make FURTHER INVESTIGATION in this case and if Mrs. Cusumano has been wronged, have the wrong righted?

It is safe to say that a large majority of the people of Massachusetts will approve of the action of the Governor and the Council. Anything in favor of the woman discovered in the future would have availed nothing had they allowed the law to take its course after yesterday's deliberation.

Massachusetts does not want to send a woman and especially an INNOCENT woman to the death chair. Neither does she want to send an INNOCENT woman to prison for life.

He Never Had a Chance

That is what nine men out of ten who are failures say. Look out that you don't say it yourself.

No. 10.

One of the regulars in the corner saloon straightened Yum up, and he left to see some good friends. Yum wanted to start all over again and be a right guy.

He thought he'd take a small beer for luck before he started, but one of the gang told him that drinking beer wasn't right; whiskey was the stuff. Drinking beer, he said, always made him think of a fellow trying to scratch his back without any finger nails.

Yum took a few shots and went down to see an old friend. He sat in the hall. When the office boy asked for his name he said, "Just tell him that Yum is here; he'll know." The boy returned to tell Yum that his boss was out. Yum went to other offices, but they all seemed to be out.

Finally he thought of the boy that drove the butcher wagon in the small town years ago. He came out and saw Yum. He thought perhaps that if his old pal was given a helping hand he might get going after all. He told Yum to see him the next day and that he'd rig him up with some new scenery and give him a job.

The world seemed brighter now. Yum had a slight chance at least.—By TAD.

The Importance of Taking One Step at a Time.

To Get On in Life You Must Know How to Keep Yourself Healthy.

By THOMAS TAPPER.

HEALTH results from the engine being in good condition. Energy is a plentiful supply of steam. Intelligence consists in how to keep the engine moving, or the rails, instead of using the energy to dump it into a ditch. This is a tragedy. And another one is to have an engine AND NO STEAM.

It is important, then, to know how to keep the latter moving, for that is the actual GETTING ON (or the moving forward) in life. To know how to keep the engine moving means that we must know how to produce energy.

There are two ways:

1. By following rigidly, as the Italian, Cornaro, did, the necessary rules in your own case in regard to food, drink, breathing, sleep. These are the basis. They keep the body in tune and the mind is clear. Is there anything else to do? There is.

To make an engine move, water must be heated, and turned into an invisible force, called steam. To heat the water that it may be turned to steam requires fire.

Do the same thing with the physical engine. Put the proper fuel into it to burn, which is food in the stomach exactly as you would treat the kitchen stove, using enough fuel for the fire you want, and never filling the grate so that the covers bulge up. When this is done, probably the steam will begin to come in the form of thought, WHICH IS THE ONLY MOTIVE POWER WE HAVE.

A man travelling in Switzerland, in the easy fashion of the Summer tourist, was urged by some friends to join them in climbing the Matterhorn. He declined at first, but finally they persuaded him to try it. In describing his experience up and down that famous peak he emphasized, first, the extreme care of the guides. Next, the mental bracing he felt in facing danger hour after hour; the care that had to be exercised IN TAKING ONE STEP AT A TIME; the thought of Fear that had to be banished when he realized that one single misstep meant a fall of thousands of feet into an eternal refrigerator.

But he reached the top, and by the same mental and physical experience he reached the bottom again. Then, his vacation being over, he left Switzerland and went home again to work. And then he began, so he said, to draw dividends on that trip up the Matterhorn. Situations in business that had hitherto seemed difficult to him now seemed easy. He had learned, in what seemed at that time a terrible experience, TO TAKE ONE STEP AT A TIME IN ALL HIS UNDERTAKINGS, AND TO TAKE IT WITH CARE.

Nor was the lesson of the guides lost upon him. They prepared for the worst that could happen before they started up. That seemed to him a good idea, and he began to apply it in all his business—getting all things ready for a new business venture before he started up.

This illustrates the energetic action of the mind when the owner has done one difficult thing, and done it well.

To the man who looks at the Milky Way through a telescope there is opened up in a flash the infinity of space. He no longer walks in his little world thinking that the rest of the universe circles around it and him. It puts to isolate the mind with the fact that the universe is larger than the office where we work.

To get more energy, inspire the Mind.

An Ode to Indigestion

By PERCY SHAW

SUMMER poets, as you linger,
Inky spots on cheek and finger,
Looking blankly at the view,
Why not cut the "brook entrancing"
And the "winds like nymphs a-dancing"
For some theme a trifle new?

There are books on Inspiration;
On the charms of green creation;
On the heather and the lea;
There are volumes on the breaking,
Roaring, calm and gentle waking
Of the much belettered sea.

I propose, without a notion
Of a fee, that there's emotion
In a more persuasive lore;
Try an ode on Indigestion.
There is food in this suggestion
Never fully tried before.

Ah, I see your fancy gleaming
With a fitful burst of dreaming.
As you think of apple pie;
As you picture shortcake, very
Deeply studded with strawberry,
To attract the greedy eye.

This is not a full prescription,
But a meekly made description
Meant to help you as you write;
When the midnight moon is glowing
With an unalloyed delight.

Give sensations as you feel them,
Make no effort to conceal them,
And the last result will be,
If you know your indigestion,
Something odd, and without question
Something worth our while to see.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

WANTS HIGH COST INQUIRY.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—There is talk of an international inquiry into the high cost of living. I hope something will be done. I have worked steadily for ten years, and the landlord, the stores, the doctors and a few others have got everything I earned. I ship in for a medal for the man who solves this problem of "high cost and nothing saved."

H. G. E.

STRIKES POPULAR CHORD

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—In your admirable editorial "One Six Year Term for the Presidency," you say: "If this is to be a responsible, permanently, why not legislate rather to increase, than diminish, the people's power?"

The popular demand for the initiative and referendum is pretty good evidence. The people will not stand much longer for anything that tends to diminish rather than increase their power.

No such important piece of legislation should be enacted from now on without the people having the final say as to whether they approve or disapprove of it.

Mr. Hearst certainly strikes a popular chord when he says, "What Jefferson and Jackson favored should not be lightly put aside by those who believe in the right of the people to rule."

Dorothy Dix Writes —OF— Telling Wives About Their Husbands —AND— How Such Tales Bring Only Misery

By Dorothy Dix

A CERTAIN woman knows a married man whom she meets out, now and again, at theatres and restaurants in company with a flashy-looking girl wearing many near diamonds, and exaggerated clothes, and peroxided hair.

The married man is always playing the devoted to the painted lady, and looks idiotically pleased and flattered, and as if he had had a little too much to drink, and his female companion has about her all of the expression of the cat that is about to dine upon the canary.

Now the married man has at home a dear little wife and babies, and the woman who sees him indulging in forbidden pleasures wants to know if it isn't her duty to go and tell his wife.

NO. A THOUSAND TIMES NO. Blasted and accursed be the tongue that bears the tale of a husband's shortcomings to his wife.

What good could possibly come of telling a woman that her husband is in love with another woman, or is making himself a fool over another woman? No woman is so ignorant of life as to think that there is anything that the wife can do to better the situation. There is no household remedy for unfaithfulness. There is no known specific for keeping a wandering husband nailed to his own fireside if he has a roving disposition.

Wife's Tears Will Not Keep Husband from Doing Wrong

Whether a wife knows where her husband is and what he is doing, or only suspects it, or is utterly deceived about it, has no more effect on his conduct than the weather. We may know it is going to rain tomorrow, but our knowledge won't prevent it from raining.

A wife's knowing that her husband is flirtatious, and that while she's walking the baby with the colic at home he is opening wine for chorus girls, will not stop him from doing it.

Neither will her tears nor her reproaches, because if he considered her feelings in the matter he would be treading the straight and narrow way instead of dallying on the primrose path.

Neither can the most jealous wife alive chaperon her husband every minute of his time, or keep him under lock and key.

So what possible good can come of telling her of conditions that she cannot change, and the knowledge of which can only bring her misery?

Suppose the wife is really ignorant of her husband's side-stepping. Suppose she believes him when he tells her that the reason he didn't get home until 2 o'clock in the morning was because he had to see a customer from Oshkosh, or there was some special work at the office that had to be done that very night. Suppose the wife is happy and contented in the faith that her husband is as true to her as she is to him, and that she is the only woman in the world to him as he is the only man to her.

out of her dream of happiness?

Is not that ignorance the bliss of which the poet wrote? Is it the part of a friend to shake that faith? Could anything be crueler than to waken such a woman up out of her dream of happiness?

Let Her Believe in Husband as Long as She Can

For heaven's sake, for pity's sake, let her stay in her hypnotic trance as long as she can. Let her believe in her husband as long as she can. Let her trust him as long as she can.

Why, every day I see a woman who has made a little tin god of a miserable little two-by-four, shallow brained, selfish, conceited coxscomb of a husband whom she worships for attributes he never possessed, and I would put my hand in the fire before I would raise a finger to tear down her altar.

Love cannot live without illusion, and there is no greater crime than to strip the hale from her husband's head and exhibit a man to his wife as he really is. Nor is there any other such vandalism as destroying faith in her husband in a wife's heart.

But suppose a woman does know that her husband is faithless to her. Suppose she hides the bitter secret from the world, and puts up a brave and courageous bluff of ignorance, why call her hand? Do you not realize that for her to know that the world knows her shame, that her friends pity her, and that casual acquaintances smile at her with cynical amusement, adds the last drop of wormwood and gall to her cup of sorrow?

It is a hard thing for a woman to bear to know that she has lost her husband's love, that he is weary of her, and that he finds other women more attractive, but it is harder still to have it forced home on her that other people know it, and for this reason, if for no other, malice itself might hesitate to go to a wife with the story of her husband's flirtations.

There are many women who have pride and strength enough to keep up a brave face, and to stand with their backs against the doors of their skeleton closets defying anybody to guess what rattling bones are hidden within it. We might well take off our bonnets before such gallantry, and at least pay such courage the tribute of our silence.

Tale-Bearer Makes Herself First Aid to Divorce

The only tangible effect of going to a woman with the evidence of her husband's shortcomings is to precipitate a family row, and to be a first aid to divorce. Surely no woman who calls herself the friend of another woman can want to do a thing like that. Nor does such a revelation tend to promote affection in the unfortunate wife's breast, for there are none whom we hate so thoroughly as those who tell us the things we would rather die than hear.

There is no possible excuse for anybody telling a woman of her husband's faults. If she is ignorant of them what she doesn't know doesn't trouble her. If she does know it adds to her humiliation and sorrow to realize that other people scoff at the weaknesses of the man she loves. It is not a sense of duty but malice and all uncharitableness that prompts anybody to be a tale bearer between husband and wife.
